Blossom Record

Victoria's second annual flower count is over with 470,600 blossoms bursting their way into the record book, and hopes are that next year's count will be bigger and better.

The main objective of the chamber of commerce sponsored event is to encourage tourists to holiday in Victoria year 'round since the weather is so good, project co-ordinator Carmella Costigan said today.

She said she feels the publicity campaign is working. Last year 183,643 flowers were tallied.

Steelmen Computerize Talks

TRAIL (CP) — When the United Steelworkers and the Association of Commercial and Technical Employees negotiating council sits down next week with the management of Cominco to bargain on behalf of 6,000 Cominco employees, they will be using the latest industrial relations tool to assist them at the bargaining table, a full operational computer terminal.

The idea of computer-assisted bargaining was first introduced to Canada by the United Steelworkers in 1975 during negotiations with the International Nickel Company (Inco) and the Steel Company of Canada (Stelco).

In practice, computer-assisted bargaining proved such a success that the system has been installed for use in the Cominco negotiations which are expected to be tough and lengthy, the Steelworkers said.

The portable computer terminal has been installed in the Local 480 Steelworker Hall in Trail and is connected with the union's main computer information banks in Toronto, which in turn can draw on the main international union computer in Pittsburgh.

Manning the system at the Trail end will be Paul Brennan of the union's research staff who has been assigned to the Cominco negotiations. The Toronto portion of the network will be operated by Ken Waldie in the Steelworker's national office research department.

In addition to supplying immediate information on all Cominco bargaining unit employees' wages, status, seniority and other pertinent bargaining information, the computer's memory banks have been programmed by the union to supply pension plans, actuarial data plus market and other types of information on Cominco multinational operations.

The extra bonus in the computer-assisted bargaining system is the ability to plug into the huge Statistics Canada computer information banks which are maintained by the federal government in Ottawa, containing literally millions of facts and figures on all aspects of the Canadian economy, including metals production, marketing figures and other invaluable bargaining information.

NO RIFLE REGISTRATION

Gov't Backs Off On Gun Control

TORONTO (CP) — Justice Minister Ron Basford promised a minimum of bureaucratic interference with the legitimate rights of gun owners in a speech Friday to the Ontario Federation of Anglers and Hunters.

The federation has been critical of some aspects of proposed federal fire-arm legislation.

Basford attempted to alleviate two of the federation's major concerns — mandatory registration of rifles and shotguns and a proposal that would require a character investigation of anyone purchasing a fire-arm.

"There may still be those among you who think that long-gun registration is part of our policy," the federal minister said. "It never has been."

"Registration of small, easily concealed handguns is a necessity and it appears to be effective in keeping down the number of incidents of handgun abuse," he said.

"However, the government believes that registration of long-guns is not an acceptable or workable control mechanism."

Basford said he would not push for the adoption of a so-called guarantor's regulation — a proposal that would require a person to supply two character references when applying to buy a fire-arm.

"I thought it might be a good way of involving the community in controlling the issuance of guns to irresponsible people," Basford said in an interview. "But this was seen by many people as a largely snooping function."

Fred Luff of Oakville, federation president, said he was surprised by Basford's remarks on the registration of long-guns and that he felt the minister indicated a greater concern for the views of gun owners.

"Before I had the feeling that we were making presentations to the government that weren't being taken seriously," Luff said.

"What we're really concerned with is that the 300,000 legitimate gun owners in Canada were being penalized for a situation that a few non-legitimate people were creating," he said.

Luff said the federation "could probably live with" a regulation that would delay the delivery of a fire-arm for a specified period after purchase and agreed with Basford that education is a key element in gun-control legislation.

In his speech, Basford had proposed mandatory prison sentences for persons convicted of fire-arm offences and regulations that would prohibit those convicted of serious violent crimes from possessing fire-arms.

He said such a regulation, combined with increased search and seizure powers that would allow police to seize fire-arms in situations such as domestic disputes which "reasonably look like they might lead to violence," might go a long way toward reducing crimes of violence.

Most people agree with the need for legislation to control fire-arms, Basford said.

He said, however, that "the method must be both efficient and fair, contain built-in protection against abuse, and provide full access to a judicial, non-bureaucratic appeal procedure."

Bottle scavenger Rudy Achorner at home

$10,000 SURPRISE

ABBOTSFORD (CP) — Rudy Achorner, 45, of Abbotsford was driving along the Trans-Canada Highway Wednesday looking for beer bottles to cash in, and came up with $10,000 in cash stolen last Friday from a Chilliwack Super-Valu store.

Achorner, who turned the money over to the RCMP, said he was driving slowly along the highway when he spotted a leather coat.

"I backed up, thinking I might be able to use the coat, and when I unfolded it, there was this Royal Bank money bag wrapped up inside," said Achorner.

"I opened it up, and sure enough, there was all this money. So I took it home with me and listened to the radio and television to see if anybody had been robbed lately.

He admitted later that he had been tempted to keep the money.

"I thought about it for a moment, but I decided it wasn't worth it. All those bills were probably marked, and if I spent them they would be easy to trace."

Achorner phoned the Royal Bank branch at Chilliwack, and they told him to bring the money in for safekeeping just in case someone had seen him pick it up. The bank contacted the police.

Bank authorities told him he probably will receive a reward but that he will have to wait to see whether police can locate the remainder of the stolen cash. About $14,000 remains to be found.

Achorner, who immigrated from Austria in 1954, was clearing wood from the small farm he owned 15 years ago when he threw out his back.

The injury became worse until he couldn't do any heavy work and had to go on welfare. Five years ago, he had to sell his farm because he couldn't afford to expand his milking operation — the only way he could have remained solvent.

Now, he brings in $160 a month from his welfare payments, plus an extra $10 to $15 from part-time jobs — one of them selling bottles.

And on The Rose Pages . . .

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canadian information officials are proving that Prime Minister Trudeau's coming visit is not a matter to be taken lightly.

Landing on newsroom desks this week was an elaborate, color-coded, thumb-indexed, plastic-bound press kit of more than 500 pages.

Crammed with old speeches, news releases, background papers and biographies, the intimidating volume gives the Canadian position on a wide range of topics that could arise in Trudeau's talks with President Jimmy Carter.

With attention to detail, a note at the beginning informs readers that English material on the white pages is the same as French on blue pages, while bilingual texts are on yellow pages. English-only material is on rose-colored pages and French-only material is on green pages. The note is only in French.

Supertanker Blockade Planned

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Greenpeace Foundation and United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union will join forces to blockade the Strait of Juan de Fuca and Dixon Entrance against supertankers travelling the B.C. coast.

Bob Hunter, president of the environmentalist foundation, said Friday that "the basic Canadian reaction to the inevitability of supertanker oil spills along our coast has been to lie down and whimper a lot.

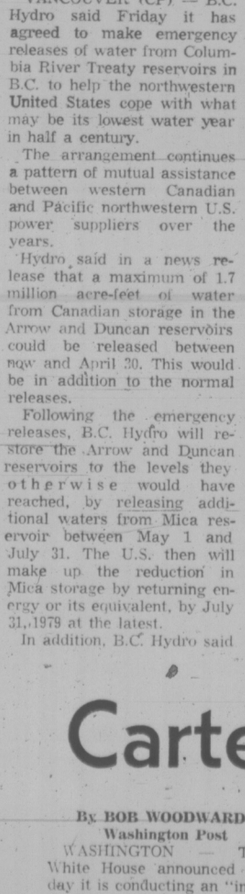
"The time has come to take direct action," said Hunter. "Our entire west coast environment is threatened by the short-term interests of oil industry. We represent the vast majority of British Columbians when we say we simply do not want these tankers coming into our waters . . .

"Our position is simple: No supertankers. We will put boats into the front line along with the fishermen. It's a drastic action, but we are forced into it by the failure of our federal or provincial governments to do anything at all to defend our shores from this threat."

He said Greenpeace was inviting "every person with a boat on the west coast to join our flotilla."

The UFAWU convention here approved a plan Friday to organize the blockades in an effort to stop the tankers from plying B.C. waters.

The fishermen said the flotillas will stand in the way of supertankers heading through Juan de Fuca Strait to the Cherry Point oil refinery, and any tankers destined for Kitimat, if a proposed pipeline and oil port are built there.



Emergency Water To Flow to U.S.

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. Hydro said Friday it has agreed to make emergency releases of water from Columbia River Treaty reservoirs in B.C. to help the northwestern United States cope with what may be its lowest water year in half a century.

The arrangement continues a pattern of mutual assistance between western Canadian and Pacific northwestern U.S. power suppliers over the years.

Hydro said in a news release that a maximum of 1.7 million acre-feet of water from Canadian storage in the Arrow and Duncan reservoirs could be released between now and April 30. This would be in addition to the normal releases.

Following the emergency releases, B.C. Hydro will restore the Arrow and Duncan reservoirs to the levels they otherwise would have reached, by releasing additional waters from Mica reservoir between May 1 and July 31. The U.S. then will make up the reduction in Mica storage by returning energy or its equivalent, by July 31, 1979 at the latest.

In addition, B.C. Hydro said it will be paid about $500,000 for energy produced at downstream U.S. generating plants as a result of the emergency releases.

"There will be no reduction in the amount of power available to British Columbia as a result of the emergency arrangement," the utility said.

"B.C. Hydro's own generating system, which includes the vast Williston Lake reservoir on the Peace River, is designed to accommodate a sequence of low-water years without limiting its ability to supply power for subsequent years."

Because of low run-offs this year, however, Hydro recently halted exports of surplus power to the U.S. in order to ensure that B.C. Hydro reservoirs do not fall below adequate levels.

A mid-February water supply outlook for the Columbia basin in the U.S. northwest, issued by the national weather service and the soil conservation service in the U.S., estimated that Columbia River run-off at The Dalles, Ore., will be about 57 million acre-feet for the period January through July.

Toxic Spill Threatens Thousands

CINCINNATI (AP) — A 75-mile-long spill of a toxic chemical, believed discharged in West Virginia, is flowing down the Ohio River and threatening water supplies as far south as Louisville, Ky.

Public officials urged people to boil all drinking water.

Joseph Harrison, chief of water supply at Chicago's branch of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), said the chemical—carbon tetrachloride—can damage the liver and has caused cancer in laboratory test animals.

"If you drink it, you probably won't be acutely affected right away," he said. "There is a risk, it could cause cancer eventually. It's a high risk."

"We have a good idea at this point what company is the source," said James Manwaring, EPA director in Philadelphia, but he declined to identify the firm.

The 70-ton spill is travelling 12 miles a day. EPA officials estimated Friday it might take four days to reach Cincinnati, the next major city in the path of the chemical.

Young Thieves Fall Out; Victim Left Unscathed

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

A group of youths who flagged down a 26-year-old North Saanich woman early today with the intention of robbing her fell out among themselves.

The result: One wound up stabbed.

Central Saanich police said the unidentified woman was on her way home from work at about 3 a.m. when a man ran out into the middle of Pat Bay Highway at the Island View intersection and flagged her down.

Police said the man told the woman a friend had been hurt and asked her to help.

When she got out of her car the man pulled a knife and said he was going to rob her.

Three other youths who had been hiding in a ditch beside the road emerged and got into the woman's car driving it 300 feet down Island View to Lochside.

The woman was forced at knife point to walk the distance.

As the four were going through her purse a fifth youth who had apparently been asleep in the back seat of the suspects' car parked nearby awoke and tried to stop the robbery.

A wild fight broke out and the woman watched in horror as the man with the knife attacked the youth, slashing him in the head and stabbing him in the abdomen and stomach.

The scuffle lasted several minutes, police said, with the two men knocking against the women's car, bending a fender and splattering the side with blood.

The youth eventually collapsed, bleeding profusely. His companions threw him in the back of their car and sped off south on Pat Bay Highway leaving behind the woman and her purse.

Police presume the wounds were serious. All hospitals in the Greater Victoria area have been alerted but no one matching the description of the youth has yet been admitted for treatment.

Police said the five youths are 16 to 20 years of age. The man with the knife had long brown hair and was about six feet tall.

The woman, although badly shaken, was unhurt.

Police described the suspects' car as a 1957 Chevrolet, dark in color with brown primer paint on the left front fender.

The attempted robbery took place at the same spot on the highway where a woman motorist was abducted last November by a man who raped her.

In that incident the woman was returning home late at night when the traffic signals at the intersection changed forcing her to stop. As she was waiting a man opened the passenger door and climbed in.

AUTO KILLS YOUTH

One youth is dead and three others were injured, one seriously, after two traffic mishaps in Saanich early today.

Dead is William Alexander Wilson, 19, of 4520 Bissenden.

Saanich police said Wilson was killed instantly when he walked into the path of a southbound car on Pat Bay Highway in front of the Royal Oak Inn at 12:54 a.m.

Driver of the car, John Frederick Weed, 19, of 3596 Tillicum, told police the youth appeared to "come out of nowhere."

Wilson, who had just left the Royal Oak Inn where he had been drinking beer with friends, was knocked 190 feet through the air, his body landing on a grassy strip beside the road.

The fatality was the second in Saanich in a 24-hour period.

Meanwhile, Dennis Wilson, 14, of 994 Cloverdale, is reported in serious condition after a car crash.

Police said Wilson was a passenger in a car that slammed into a hydro pole at the corner of Saanich Road and Falmouth at 5:45 a.m.

The driver of the car, Glen Blandeau, 19, and another passenger, Lloyd Lindsay, 14, both of 3024 Bethune, were taken to Royal Jubilee where they are in fairly good condition.

Police believe the trio was setting out on a fishing trip at the time of the accident.

The hydro pole was severed at its base kocking out power in the area for a short time.

Carter Probing CIA Payments

By BOB WOODWARD
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The White House announced Friday it is conducting an "intensive and comprehensive" review of foreign intelligence operations as new reports circulated that the CIA had secret financial relationships with at least half a dozen other foreign leaders.

The announcement of the presidential review was made by press secretary Jody Powell during a briefing to reporters in which he declined to comment on a report in The Washington Post Friday that the CIA has for 20 years been making secret cash payments to King Hussein of Jordan.

Powell's statement was the first official indication of the president's concern over CIA activities and his apparent intention to bring them under control.

In a statement read by Powell the administration pointedly praised King Hussein as "an outstanding national leader" who had "played a constructive role in reducing tensions in the Middle East."

The payments to Hussein are not the only example of the CIA paying money to world leaders, according to reliable sources.

Cypriot President Archbishop Markarios received amounts of approximately $1 million annually in the late 1960s, the sources said. It is not known if these CIA payments have continued.

In his session with reporters, Powell doggedly refused to elaborate on his opening statement. At times during the sensitive briefing the questioning grew tense and Powell appeared to be groping for words.

Sources said that President Jimmy Carter ordered the Hussein payments stopped this week within a day of learning of them.

It was learned, meanwhile, that the court-censored manuscript of a book by two former government intelligence officers named Hussein along with Jomo Kenyat-

B.C. will study the possibility of obtaining federal funds for insulation of homes and buildings, Premier Bill Bennett said Friday. Liberal leader Gordon Gibson said Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia are already receiving aid.

ALASKA PLANS BOOZING CURBS

JUNEAU (AP) — Some of the harshest anti-alcohol laws in the United States have been proposed to curb hard-drinking Alaskans, who consume 57 per cent more liquor than the average U.S. drinker.

Gov. Jay Hammond, who proposed the legislation, says he has stopped counting the number of people he knows who have murdered or have been murdered during drinking sprees.

Most of the proposals Hammond unveiled Friday were aimed at Alaska's native bush villages where the long winter, seasonal employment and lack of recreation have led to heavy drinking.

The measures would allow villages to establish possession limits on alcohol, adopt unlimited sales taxes on alcohol, impose a two-week time lag between purchase and pick-up, prohibit liquor price advertising, make bootlegging a felony, and raise alcohol taxes by $10 million.

Roaches Warn Of Earthquakes

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (UPI) — Don't mash those cockroaches that may be scooting around your kitchen cabinets. A member of the U.S. Geological Survey says they may be helpful in predicting earthquakes.

The notion usually draws a snicker, but Dr. Ruth Simon, who is studying the connection between animal warnings and earthquakes, says she's found that there are certain times when the cockroaches are busy and other times when they're sedentary.

"Before an earthquake there's a marked increase in activity," Dr. Simon said.

Carter Halts Garrison Project

Canadian Press

The Carter administration, apparently without warning, has pulled the plug on the $500-million Garrison diversion project in North Dakota by ordering an immediate halt to construction.

The action Friday sent shock waves through North Dakota but brought feelings of cautious optimism to many Manitobans.

The initial hint that Carter's administration was favorably regarding Canadian concerns about the project came when the U.S. state department ordered a work stoppage on the Lonetree reservoir dam, a key part of the irrigation and municipal water supply project.

That move complied with a Canadian request last October that work on the Lonetree dam be referred until the two governments had studied the project's effects on Manitoba waters.

Many North Dakota politicians had considered the move merely as an effort by the administration to sweeten the atmosphere for Prime Minister Trudeau's visit to Washington next week.

But they reacted with shock when Senator Milton Young disclosed late Friday that all funds for the project had been removed from Carter's budget proposals.

Young said he learned from White House sources that there would be no provision for the project in today's proposed budget. Before he left office, former president Gerald Ford had put aside $18.6 million for the project this year.

Sidney Green, Manitoba's minister of mines, resources and environmental management, said the moves reaffirm the United States government's intention to stand behind its commitments.

It is "evidence of their sincerity to their commitment and an affirmation that the policy we've been following is justified."

Green and other Manitoba government officials had been under pressure to take the province's opposition to the project to court in an effort to halt construction.

"To go into court would have been an absolute disaster, but we behaved in a reasonable manner and we received reasonable treatment," Green said.

Puerto Rican Bombs Hit N.Y.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Powerful time bombs knocked out windows on several floors of two midtown skyscrapers late Friday, slightly injuring two persons and spreading glass over a wide area.

The FALN, a Puerto Rican terrorist group, claimed responsibility for the explosions at the Gulf and Western Building on the West Side and the Texaco Oil Company's touring centre in the Chrysler Building on the East Side.

A typewritten note left for police in a subway telephone booth said the bombings were carried out by the FALN to seek the release of five "political prisoners" and to protest a proposal for Puerto Rican statehood made by President Ford during the closing days of her administration.

The note listed as "political prisoners" the names of five Puerto Ricans serving life sentences for attempting to assassinate President Harry Truman and several members of congress in the 1950s.

There were no injuries at the Gulf and Western blast, but a young cab driver and his woman passenger were slightly injured by the explosion at the Chrysler Building several minutes later.

There were no fires following the explosions.

A man with a heavy Hispanic accent who claimed to represent the FALN telephoned WCBS Radio and credited the group with the bombings, a spokesman for the station said. The caller gave instructions where the note could be found.

Police said the FBI was called into the investigation.

The FALN, which seeks independesce for Puerto Rico, has claimed responsibility for several explosions in New York and other cities across the country in the past few years, including a blast that killed four persons and injured scores more on Jan. 24, 1975, at historic Fraunces Tavern in lower Manhattan.

Uganda Bodies Buried In Remote Region

Times News Services

NAIROBI — Uganda's Anglican archbishop and two senior government cabinet ministers, whose deaths sparked international outrage against President Idi Amin, have been buried secretly in northern Uganda, church sources said today.

"We don't know where and we don't know when, but they have been buried in northern Uganda," one church source said.

"The cathedral in Kampala has also been sealed off by troops," a church source said.

The church reports coincided with local news reports today that the bodies of the three men had been flown secretly to northern Uganda.

The reports, yet to be officially confirmed, heightened widespread international speculation the three men had been murdered and not killed accidentally in a car crash as claimed by Uganda.

The three — Archibishop Janani Luwum, internal affairs minister Charles Oboth Ofumbi, and land and water resources minister Lt. Col. Erinayo Oryema — were arrested Wednesday and implicated in a plot to overthrow Amin.

They allegedly were killed a few hours later when their vehicle crashed into an oncoming car as they attempted to escape en route to an interrogation.

Uganda also released an official photograph showing the car in which the three men reportedly died.

However, its roof was intact. The official version of the accident said the roof had caved in and this was a major factor in the deaths of the three men.

There was speculation in East African capitals that troops had disobeyed Amin's direct orders and — following a public rally in which they chanted "kill them, kill them today" — pursued the three men and killed them.

The Standard newspaper in Nairobi said the widows of the three now have been arrested and that six other persons, including two unnamed Anglican bishops and an air force lieutenant, were killed Thursday night. The reports could not be immediately confirmed.

Meanwhile, in Ottawa, a motion suggesting that Uganda be declared an international outlaw was rejected in the Commons Friday.

Carter Probing CIA Payments

ta of Kenya, Joseph Mobutu of Zaire, Forbes Burnham of Guyana, Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam and Willy Brandt of West Germany as national leaders who had secret financial relationships with the CIA.

The book, The CIA and the Cult of Intelligence, by Victor Marchetti, a former CIA official, and John Marks, a former state department officer, was published with the names of the recipients deleted, said sources familiar with the original manuscript. The deletions were ordered in federal district court as a result of the CIA civil suit.

Brandt issued a statement in Bonn today denying as libelous insinuation the report that he got secret CIA funds.

"This is a warmed-up, backstairs story already published at various times. . . . It is to be deplored that news agencies are carrying this report without any serious source," spokesman Lothar Schwartz said.

In Nicosia President Makarios today described the Post article as an "unfounded and malicious allegation."

The archbishop challenged the newspaper to publish details in support of its charges.

The Dalai Lama, the exiled god-king of Tibet, was on the CIA payroll for some time after he fled to India in 1959 to escape the Communist Chinese takeover of Tibet.

His Holiness, the 14th Dalai Lama, is equivalent to the Pope to an estimated six million Tibetans. It is also not known if these payments continue.

The sources said that there are appoximately six to eight other former national leaders that have at one time or another received covert payments for the CIA.

2 DEFORMED BABIES BORN NEAR FACTORY

MILAN (Reuter) — Two deformed babies have been born at Sevetso, the town north of here where the highly toxic chemical Dioxin escaped from a chemical plant last year, a senior health official said Friday.

The babies, born in the last three weeks, suffered intestinal damage, one of them with blockages in three places, said Vittorio Rivolta, head of the Lombardy regional goernment's health department.

The malformations could not be directly attributed to Dioxin since they were not unusual, but a link could not be ruled out, he said. "We have to await the outcome of further medical checks."

Scientists fear the 4½ pounds of Dioxin released by an explosion at the Swiss-owned Icmesa factory in Seveso last July could cause liver disfunctions and fetal and genetic damage.

A baby with a cleft palate and slightly deformed jaw was born Jan. 18 to a woman who frequently visited a relative in the Seveso area during her pregnancy, Prof. Giovanni Verca of Pavia Hospital said earlier this week. Local doctors said dozens of normal babies have been born in the same period.

Separatists in CBC Denied, And No Hunt for Them Planned

OTTAWA (CP) — The CBC will make major programming changes this fall to integrate the English-and French-language networks more fully, but there will be no hunt for separatists within the publicly - owned agency, CBC president Al Johnson said Friday.

"We have never engaged people on the basis of a political blood test and we are not going to start now," Johnson told reporters after outlining 29 English and French television network program changes in a speech to a service club.

He defended Radio-Canada, the French arm of the national television and radio broadcasting system, saying its news and public affairs employees "have been systematically applying the highest standards of journalism."

The speech followed a week of almost unprecedented attacks on the CBC by senior Liberal politicians, including members of the Trudeau cabinet.

In the Commons Friday, Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said any allegations of pro-separatist bias in the CBC should be discussed in a parliamentary committee. He made the suggestions during a shouting match with opposition MPs who said Liberal politicians are flaying the CBC for refusing to be a slave to the Liberal party.

There were demands in the Senate for an inquiry into the claimed separatist presence within Radio-Canada and an attack by newly-appointed Senator Jean Marchand who said Radio-Canada supported the separatist Parti Quebecois government in its campaign for independence in Quebec.

Johnson told a Kiwanis Club luncheon of plans for expanded news and public affairs programming, co-productions of English and French television services, including a new situation comedy to be filmed in both languages, and new variety and sports shows.

He passed only lightly over the separatism dispute in the speech, but later told reporters he did not accept allegations that Radio-Canada is biased against federalism.

He said any investigation of the kind suggested in the Senate should cover all broadcasting systems in Canada, including the privately-owned CTV Television Network Ltd. and Global Television as well as the CBC.

"To say somebody is biased is to say somebody systematically seeks to promote a particular point of view, he said. "I simply do not believe the CBC does that."

Meanwhile, Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said charges of a pro-separatist bias in the CBC French network should perhaps be studied by a parliamentary committee.

Carter Defends Sakharov Letter

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the face of growing Soviet displeasure, the Carter administration Friday defended its efforts to ease political repression in the Soviet Union and cited the Helsinki pact as the lega basis for U.S. concern.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said that when President Jimmy Carter wrote a warm personal letter to Soviet dissident Andrei Sakharov, Carter was responding to a Nobel prize winner. He was not attempting to challenge the government of the Soviet Union but to act as a duly elected spokesman of the American people."

At the state department, spokesman Frederick Brown rejected the Soviet assertion that the United States was meddling in internal Soviet affairs. Brown said: "Our view is that human rights is an issue which goes beyond national borders."

Tass, the Soviet news agency, reported that Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin has told state department officials that Moscouw rejects any attempts to interfere in internal Soviet affairs.

Dobrynin's reported protest came after disclosures that Carter had written Sakharov earlier this week. In his letter, Carter promised: "We shall use our good office to seek the release of prisoners of conscience."

Powell noted that Moscow often commented on differences of opinion within the United States. He cited support in the Soviet newspaper Pravada for Angela Davis during her trial in California, Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev's public meeting with Gus Hall, an American Communist, and frequent comments by Radio Moscow on American domestic events.

Powell said the United States has a "legal basis for our expressions of concern" in the Helsinki agreement and its stated concern for human freedoms."

Meanwhile, in Geneva, the U.S. moved Friday to bring reported arrests of Soviet human rights campaigners before a United Nations body now meeting here.

U.S. delegation officials said they submitted to the Secretariat of the UN Human Rights Commission a draft telegram in which the 32-country body would formally express concern to Soviet authorities about the reported detentions, and ask for information.

Licences Name Donors

REGINA (CP) — An organ donor program associated with the renewal of drivers' licences in Saskatchewan was announced Friday by Health Minister Wes Robbins.

The new program, which will come into effect May 1, is the result of joint efforts by the departments of health and finance and the Highway Traffic Board.

Essentially, the program consists of an organ donor card attached to all individual drivers' lincences, the announcement said.

Drivers who reach the age of 18 will be asked to consent to the gift of their organs simply by signing the organ donor card. Potential donors will be encouraged to carry the card with them at all times.

Sales Tax in Airplanes Ruled Invalid by Judge

WINNIPEG (CP) — A Manitoba Court of Queen's Bench judge ruled Friday that the province has no right to collect various taxes from Air Canada flights flying over Manitoba.

Mr. Justice Peter Morse, in a 57-page written report released Friday, did not, however, order the province to repay the nearly $1.4 million it has collected from Air Canada in such taxes over a three-year period from July 1, 1971 to June 30, 1974.

The judge said Air Canada should not have been taxed under the Manitoba retail sales act for aircraft, aircraft engines and parts, services, meals and liquor consumed or supplied in the aircraft while flying over the province.

The decision follows the tax trial which opened Jan. 18 and ended Jan. 26 with the judge reserving his decision.

The Crown airline company took the case to trial after the Manitoba government imposed the retail sales tax again on May 4, 1976, under an amendement to the Retail Sales Act of Manitoba.

The provincial government said it owned all airspace above the province to a height of 39,000 feet, the maximum height for a transcontinental flight over Manitoba.

Mr. Justice Morse said the province does not own the airspace over the land and therefore had no right to assess or levy a tax on aircraft flying over.

Messy Public Involvement

Perhaps because its unsuccessful attempt to stifle a civil servant who drew cartoons in his spare time grabbed all the headlines, there hasn't been much heard about another gag order issued by the provincial government.

Forest Minister Tom Waterland recently issued an order to forest service staff to keep their mouths shut on the Pearse royal commission report on forest policy.

"Of course, I'm not trying to muzzle anybody. But what I am saying is that senior civil servants involved in highly sensitive talks and recommendations over future government policy should not discuss these matters in public forums."

Of course, muzzle is the exact description for Waterland's order. No one denies that future government forest policy is a sensitive topic, but telling forest service staff not to say anything publicly just means that the public won't find out much.

He can't expect people to believe that the forest industry doesn't know what's going on. It maintains a lobbyist in Victoria while the legislature is in session, who gathers from encounters with politicians and others much useful intelligence for his employers.

Other forest industry executives are engaged in an ongoing consultative process with Waterland's department concerning the Pearse report. Obviously, the minister and the government are not going to present hoius bolus a new Forest Act to the legislature next year without consulting those whom the legislation most directly affects. It is standard procedure in drafting any legislation, and there is nothing improper about it.

So the forest industry has a very good idea of the drift of thought in the forest department on new policies. The minister's department is well-advanced into its task of drafting new policies, and government insiders know what's up.

It will only be a full-blown surprise to the public at large, but they only count at elections anyway. If that seems too harsh an interpretation of Waterland's directive, what other is there? His order will be interpreted by forest staff throughout the province and their local superiors as a blanket prohibition on discussing the Pearse report in public, period.

We hadn't noticed a tendency by the forest service to be overly blabby about the Pearse report before now, but the minister's explicit order will kill any public discussion now. He seems to want a nice orderly, secret process of policy-making, involving just his department and the forest industry. No messy public involvement, no public discussion or debate. The department and the industry know what's best. Go back to sleep.

Vander Zalm of the Jungle

That was a well-deserved upbraiding delivered to Victoria by Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm on Wednesday. The city is going downhill and is no longer the quaint and delightful spot it was a quarter century ago when the minister first visited Victoria, he told the chamber of commerce.

Just another concrete jungle of "plywood subdivisions, gasoline stations, hamburger stands and car lots" was Vander Zalm's pithy description of the capital of British Columbia.

Vander Zalm the city planner? Why not, since he's an expert on everything else? Corn flakes and French, welfare bums, tulip bulbs, civil service productivity, unemployment — but especially the aesthetics of the urban experience. The minister should know a concrete jungle when he sees one; he represents Surrey in the legislature, one of the worst urban blights north of Orange County, Calif. and west of Mississauga, Ont.

And, while he was mayor of Surrey municipality, what was merely destroyed and rundown blossomed into acres of asphalt and blowzy neon. Picture in your mind Douglas Street from Town and Country shopping centre to Hillside Avenue, make it brighter and gaudier and about 10 miles long. Without subjecting yourself to visiting the place, that's Vander Zalm's home turf in a nutshell.

To flesh out the word picture of Surrey, as you drive off the Patullo bridge from New Westminster on your left, a charming and quaint wholesale plumbing establishment, attractive scrapyards, a lovely drive-in movie lot. Higher up the hill in beautiful downtown Whalley we find the enchanting, the baroque, the antique — a feast for the eyes. Million-square-foot shopping centres to the right of us, car lots to the left of us, ingeniously designed hamburger shoppes — all fanciful and captivating, a swell treat for those who tire of the conventional and unimaginative. And all on the aptly-named King George highway!

Perhaps if the chamber of commerce asks him back for an encore, the minister might offer a few pointers based on his own municipal experience on how to similarly redo Victoria's tacky and distinctly untasteful downtown.

Maybe we might copy the provincial government itself, which worked hard and long to make Colwood and Langford mature into such interesting, exciting urban action spots. Trailer courts! Secondhand stores! Gas stations! Motels!

None of your expensive and totally unnecessary sewers and sidewalks and street lights, which only clutter up the total tudor old English experience. Did you hear Phil Gaglardi is opening a school of town planning and urban design? Highways to Happiness is the introductory course.

EDITOR'S NOTEBOOK

Owing Our Souls to The Company Store

Back in the 1950s when growth of any sort was good Tenessee Ernie Ford sang a dirge that went like this: "You load 16 tons and what do you get? Another day older and deeper in debt."

In the 1970s when some types of growth are suspect Premier Bennett wants to load 10 million tons annually and develop the northeastern part of the province. He implies B.C. will make money.

But Liberal leader Gordon Gibson, like Tenessee Ernie, sees us deeper in debt. In one of the best researched speeches this lacklustre legislature has heard Gibson raised serious doubts Monday about the only major economic thrust this government has jawboned in 14 months of power.

The essence of the Liberal leader's message was this: world market coal prices may be less than the cost of producing and marketing a ton of northeastern coal.

Using conservative figures Gibson says mine operating costs will be $14 per ton, rail charges $18 per ton, port charges $1.50 per ton, royalties $1.50 per ton, interest based on a 10 per cent rate will be $10, and the depreciation per ton (i.e. capital equipment) will be $10, and that is depreciating over 15 years a $150 per annual ton investment.

It all adds up to a cost of $60 per ton without including any taxes. But the world selling price is $55 per ton. The latest phlogiston of British Columbia's economic alchemists suddenly takes on a darker dimension.

None of Gibson's figures include an inflation factor. He notes too that Kaiser's southeastern coal development almost doubled its cost from $90 million to $170 million before completion.

Premier Bennett airily dismissed the Liberal leader's figures Tuesday by saying they applied to southeastern coal development. Northeastern coal was of a higher grade and would therefore bring in higher revenues.

It is ironic that the premier would disparage the only set of figures on northeastern coal the public knows. His government, with $3 million worth of studies safely under wraps, as Gibson pointed out, has yet to release any meaningful cost figures to the public.

Remember, this is a grandiose scheme that could cost taxpayers of Canada and British Columbia more than $2 billion when roads, rails and towns are built.

Last October 27, Economic Development Minister Don Phillips was quoted as saying: "We don't know if coal can pay its way, and if it can't, government might have to put in some of the infrastructure."

When it comes to lunching with business the government is not afraid to reach for the cheque.

You see the game plan goes something like this: If and when all the agreements are effected the premier will stand in the house and announce that thousands of jobs have been created in the north.

It will look good in the initial headlines. So did the Columbia River deal, and it was only a fraction the anticipated costs of the current scheme.

At such a hazy future time a minute examination of freight rates and part charges should be undertaken. That's where subsidies will show up.

Meanwhile, it is not Gibson who must justify his figures, it is the government. The Liberal leader has cast serious doubts on the efficacy of this murky dream. A trained economist and a champion of responsible development, Gibson would not pour cold water on a hopeful project for mere political gain.

His figures have been derived from industry sources for the most part, the same industries that will partake in this development. A check with Ottawa and Victoria sources shows them to be accurate too.

And what about the international coal market? Japan, B.C.'s major coal customer, bought 19 per cent less coal last year. It forecasts only a three per cent growth in coal imports for this year. China has vast resources of coal and could soon be competing on the international market at controlled low prices if it needs hard currency. The Soviet Union is also a future threat.

Should B.C. commit itself to a large public expenditure in the billions of dollars on the skimpy information this government has provided?

The answer should be a resounding no. Before this pie in the sky travels any further the Bennett administration should provide a list of ingredients and how much they will cost. B.C. burned its fingers on another pie not too long ago and the wounds are still healing.

It is time the province quit juggling lumps of coal from southeast to northeast. It is time to lay the studies on the table where they can be publicly debated. Otherwise, the people of B.C. could end up owing their souls to the company store again.

Tenessee Ernie Ford sang a better economic tune in 32 bars than this government has been able to talk in 14 months — G.R.O.

Restraint?

Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Rafe Mair recently cleared $200,000 in one quick real estate deal. He claims that he is proud of this transaction and wants a chance to do it again.

I realize that many regard land speculation as a more productive activity than working in a mill or a laundry, but is there not some contradiction involved between Mair's public duty and his private business dealings?

Mair is responsible for protecting consumers' interests and for regulating the real estate industry. He is a member of the Bennett cabinet which preaches restraint in a period of inflation.

At the same time that this minister calls for restraint, he is making a killing on a land deal, praising himself for it and adding to the inflation that his government claims to be fighting.

What kind of political double talk is this? Must we assume that there are two standards of Socred restraint, one for the ruled and one for the rulers? — Gerry Scott, 4-651 Avalon Street.

Ruined Land

Since we're intent on shovelling some more sewage into the ocean that surrounds this beautiful Island of ours, I thought the following might be food for thought:

Woe to you of little sense, take warning of my call. I've watched you close, these hundred years, waiting for your fall. For years you've robbed my soil, you've turned it into dust, you've poisoned it with chemicals, and yet you call it just.

My forests have been butchered by stupid men with greed, my rivers seeth with germs and slime you say it's caused from weed.

The sky that used to look so blue, is plugged with smoke and fumes.

You've ruined most, that once was clean, beware the fate that looms.

You've heard these words, and now you say, who tells us of our share.

A mother hopes to save her young, Canada is my name.

San Francisco was unfairly maligned, says Mayor Moscone

San Francisco

I was fortunate enough to be shown a copy of T. D. Allman's story in your paper on Dec. 29, 1976, entitled San Francisco: Trashing of a City. At the risk of sounding provincial, let me tell you and your readers that T. D. Allman has written an article not only factually inaccurate, but one which does a great disservice to our city.

Let me list the factual misstatements which are made in an effort to show San Francisco's "trashing":

1. The S.L.A. kidnapping of Patty Hearst did not occur in San Francisco, nor did the blazing shoot-out which killed six S.L.A. members — that took place on national television and the setting was Los Angeles, not San Francisco. Patty Hearst and the S.L.A. travelled the length of this country during the "S.L.A. media saga of auto-destruction" and were ultimately captured in San Francisco after eluding law enforcement officials all over the nation.

2. It is stated that Lynnette Fromme's attempt on the life of President Ford took place in San Francisco. That event took place in Sacramento, over 90 miles east of San Francisco. Sacramento, T. D. Allman, for your information, is the capital of California.

3. There was no transport strike in San Francisco in 1976. We did have a strike of some 1,500 craft workers out of a total 23,785 city employees, but the threatened strike of transport workers was averted by skillful negotiation late last summer.

4. It is stated that San Francisco's gift to the U.S. Senate was S. I. Hayakawa. Hayakawa was elected by a majority of Californians who chose him over incumbent Senator John Tunney. San Francisco election results showed that San Franciscans voted overwhelmingly against Hayakawa and for Tunney. Unfortunately, when the vote came in from the southern part of the state, Hayakawa was the winner. Don't blame us for S.I.

5. It is stated that Proposition T was some uniquely San Francisco phenomenon — a desire to elect representatives by district rather than at large. That is another interesting hypothesis by T. D. Allman who must have overlooked the fact that virtually every major American city elects its council and supervisors by district, as does the U.S. Congress and every state legislature in the nation. It does not reflect some weird "collection of competing life styles" but rather a desire on the part of San Franciscans to have their elected officials more directly accountable to the people.

6. It is also stated that downtown and labor were both opposed to Proposition T. Again, Allman is way off base. Labor was united in its support of Proposition T.

7. It is stated that "a festival of love at San Francisco's Altamont Raceway ended in a terror of random murder." That convinces me that Allman has never been to San Francisco, because if he had been, he would know that Altamont is more than 50 miles from the city and San Francisco has no raceway there. It is clear that he has a real problem getting locations straight.

8. Allman's myopic view of San Francisco becomes painfully obvious when he asserts that the gays, Chinese, blacks, Hispanics; and Filipinos "have been stereotyped and made caricatures of themselves." This city is populated with a majority of those very groups Allman says "cannot be assimilated." Did Allman visit any of our restaurants, shops, hotels, bars, theatres, or retail stores to see how many are owned and operated by the very people he says cannot be assimilated. Also interesting to note is that Allman travelled 20 miles north to Tiburon, to quote a church pastor that there were no writers, artists, or musicians in San Francisco. I believe that people like Herb Caen, Lawrence Ferlingetti, the ACT group, Ruth Asawa and Kurt Herbert Adler, to mention just a few, would disagree with the Rev. Evans and his statement.

Perhaps T. D. Allman's inaccuracies are calculated and deliberate. I don't know. I do know that the article represents one of the most distorted views of San Francisco I have ever seen and the use of false facts and outright lies to prove the point represents pretty shoddy journalism.

I realize there is a tough battle for the tourist dollar and that British Columbia would like people to visit there rather than San Francisco, but come on T. D. Allman, let's not tell these little white lies about San Francisco just to tear down a great city. — George R. Moscone, Mayor, San Francisco.

Passing the Buck

The article Canada's Jobless Young: Doesn't Anyone Care? in the Times Feb. 11 and the accompanying Globe and Mail editorial certainly display the ability of our politicians and employers to pass the buck, their inability to understand the reasons for the problem.

To lay the blame for high youth unemployment on their lack of natural instinct to work only displays Joe Clark's natural instinct to regurgitate the 50-year-old myth that our controlled educational system imposes upon our youth.

For employers to complain that the educational institutions are neglecting the job needs of the economy, who is better equipped to know the ever-changing needs than the employers and they should be carrying out the on-the-job training.

For Mr. Cullen, minister of manpower, to expect an educational system to provide knowledge in relation to job requirements and for that imparted knowledge to bridge the gap for 40 years is a simple ignorance of the rapid ever-changing production, distribution, communications and office technology taking place.

Yes, our school systems are at fault in not teaching the facts, the physical factors that determine what can and cannot be done in a high extraneous energy-consuming society. If they are restrained from teaching the facts that show the inability of the free enterprise price system to provide employment of even 50 per cent in the industrial sector then it is the status quo authorities who must be blamed. If they are not restrained then the educational hierarchy must accept the blame for not providing adequate, correct and up to date knowledge in the field of social science education. Since 1920 the industrial production has been increasing and the man-hours employed decreasing. In 1910 it required 10 man-hours per unit of production, today it requires less than one man-hour. The fact that kilowatt hours of electricity in the productive sector have replaced man-hours must be accepted by all citizens of this continent. — J. J. Gibson, 920 Easter Road.

Saanich Land

An article in the Times Feb. 12, entitled 15 Firms Eyeing Royal Oak states: "Both Saanich and regional plans had earmarked the area for light industry and warehouse use." This is incorrect.

The Saanich community plan is not completed, and it is understood that it will have full community input before it is completed.

The official regional plan calls for 103 acres of the area to remain rural (a glance at the official map clearly shows this) and section 2.8 (III), Page 17, states: ". . . a concerted effort is to be made to preserve pockets of agricultural land surrounded by urban uses . . ." It is clearly stated in the appendix to the official regional plan that 48 acres are to be allocated in Saanich for future potential industrial use. This area is clearly shown on the official map as a strip paralleling the highway. The additional 120 acres (103 acres of which are rural land) makes a total of 168 acres for industrial use.

The increased potential industrial area would appear to be the idea of Saanich council alone and, whether good or bad, it should not be represented as something else. — A. Moffat, 5447 Fowler Road.

Racial Bias

One sentence was taken out of my letter concerning racial bias in school texts and as the letter does not make much sense without it, I would like to add it now.

"The Ontario study Teaching Prejudice showed that while white settlers are described in texts in a positive way, native proples are described as savage, fierce and hostile. — K. Ruff, Director, Human Rights Code, 880 Douglas Street.

BROADBENT . . . a holding operation

Shed a Tear For Plights Of Minor Party Leaders

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — If, as leaders, Pierre Trudeau and Joe Clark are having rough spells, consider the situations of minor party leaders Ed Broadbent and Andre Fortin.

The Social Credit leader seems, superficially at least, to be in the worst position but one must remember Broadbent still has a bit more to lose.

Fortin is said by his fellows to have one of Joe Clark's attributes. He's by nature a good organizer — almost a natural. Broadbent has to drive himself to it.

The federal caucus of the Social Credit is down to 10 men. The death of Real Caouette furthered the tendency in federal politics to write off the party as a future factor. This tendency has always existed, especially in English Canada, since the shocking high tide of the party's fortunes in 1972 when it elected 30 MPs. Fortin seems to have things moving again. Mountains of mail are moving out to Quebec ridings, fighting the uncalled byelections on issues of unemployment, high interest rates, and Liberal arrogance and corruption. This is a marked contrast to the long, bleak period following the 1974 federal election when Caouette was wasting away and hardly a week went by without Hill rumors that one or more of the 10 MPs was ready to join the Tories or the Liberals or even, bless us, the New Democrats.

In Quebec the federal Liberals, even the provincial Liberals, have had a more amiable tolerance for Social Credit than have the Tories and New Democrats (federally) or the PQ and the Union Nationale (provincially). It is predictable that in the by-elections (Mr. Trudeau's mini-referendum) the Liberals will be more benign about Social Credit campaigns than they will be about the Tories and whoever Roch Lasalle, Claude Wagner and Joe Clark may get to run.

As for the New Democrats, the Quebec by-elections are a terrible frustration. They must run up the flags of candidates, knowing as they do it's a token gesture. They haven't the troops on the ground nor the funds to do much but put a name on the ballot. The mooted bonds of policy and fraternity between the NDP and the PQ — social democracy and all that — will only draw hoots from all but the PQ, and the PQ will ignore the NDP.

Since well before the Quebec election the New Democrats have been doing some electoral planning. Not for the by-elections but for the federal election in 1978.

The strategy and its allied tactics which have emerged can be described as deeply pessimistic, a mere holding action (wait until 1982!) based on the judgment that the most the party could hope for would be 30 seats. (It now holds 16.) Therefore, the plans would concentrate the party's limited resources in money and able organizers on the 30 best-ridings in Canada — less than a ninth of the total.

Much of the NDP defeatism has stemmed from the low state of Liberal fortunes from the Ottawa River westward. In the past few weeks, with the prospect of a Liberal rally around a prime minister fighting Levesque to the death, some of the New Democrats are perking up. Fears of being wiped out by mammoth Tory majorities in scores of ridings are easing just a bit. If the Liberals should play back in Ontario and the West to anything like their 1974 vote the desperation strategy now developed might be ditched.

The harshest reality for the NDP federal organizers has not been much talked about openly. The relative rise of the party's fortunes in B.C., Ontario, Manitoba and Saskatchewan, reflected in governing or official opposition status, has thrown the balance of influence to the provincial organizations.

The bizarre workings of the federal electoral funding laws have accented this switch of power. The consequences of the federal law are to make the provincial wings of the NDP stronger financially. The federal party cadres must plead, almost like a charity, for any money from within the party as a whole that is beyond the 15 per cent cut it gets from membership fees and regular donations.

Such memberships are sold or raised mostly at the riding level; and ironically, using the federal tax advantages but through organizations geared more to the provincial party than the federal party. Of course, the NDP, of all the parties, maintains the two are the same. That is, a membership in one is a membership in the other.

In Ontario the provincial electoral laws passed by the Davis government have worsened matters for the federal wing of the NDP. Legal walls were put up between the movement of money back and forth between the NDP provincially and the NDP federally.

While the general effect of both federal and provincial financing systems is to improve the capability of getting money for all constituency campaigns (through the candidate's recapture) this has enhanced the provincial NDP and weakened the federal NDP simply because the basic structure of the party has become increasingly geared to the provincial organization and ridings, especially in Ontario, Saskatchewan and B.C.

In truth it is hard for the federal office and the federal leader to get money without begging at the provincial doors. Ed Broadbent has fought this but not with much success.

In blunt terms the New Democrats in Ontario, taking their cue from the larger and closer power which Stephen Lewis and his caucus represent, are largely intent on the next provincial election. Only lip service is really being given to the poor brethren in Ottawa. This explains why some realists in the federal caucus think it possible to hold only as many as the current number of seats (16) in the next federal round.

FORTIN . . . still just 'future factor'

Lifting Controls 'Lets Wolves In'

TORONTO STAR
An Editorial

The federal government will be abandoning Canadians to the economic wolves if it starts dismantling its anti-inflation controls now, as Finance Minister Donald Macdonald has indicated it might do.

Macdonald claims the country's current economic situation appears to give the government "the green light" for getting out of controls. In fact, the opposite is true. With an inflation rate of 7.5 per cent last year and about 750,000 Canadians out of work, there is every reason to stick with controls until the government can sort out the economic mess.

First of all, the anti-inflation program's objectives are far from achieved. The goal was to get the rate of price increases down to 4 per cent by next year, and Prime Minister Trudeau vowed over and over again to stay with controls until that target was reached.

Second, there is no evidence that the inflation psychology has been ended. Some improvement has been made in reducing wage demands and price increases. But in increasing cases, employers and unions are writing "AIB clauses" into their contracts, providing for a re-opening of wage negotiations as soon as the controls are lifted.

There are still a lot of price and wage pressures in the economy. When Canadians see coffee and oil prices shooting up and can expect a big jump in local taxes later this year they can hardly be expected to believe that inflation is fully under control. Nor is there much evidence that labor, especially in the public sector, has cooled its huge wage demands.

Getting inflation down to a 4 per cent rate, as Canadians were promised was the target of the anti-inflation program, still requires controls and determination.

Moreover, this was only one aim of the program.

The other major purpose was to provide time to correct some very serious structural flaws in the Canadian economy. There were outlined by Macdonald in his anti-inflation white paper, and included the country's seeming inability to get affordable housing built; the problem of maintaining a steady supply of food at prices that are fair to both farmers and consumers; and Canada's sorry labor-management situation, marked be the world's worst strike record. Since October, 1975, when controls were introduced, virtually nothing has been done to deal with these problems.

If controls are dropped, these problems won't go away by themselves; in all likelihood, they'll get worse.

Finally, getting out of controls now would simply mean a return to the economic jungle that brought on controls in the first place. We have barely begun the process of gaining a new consensus on post-controls Canada — to agree on what are fair wages and salaries for various kinds of work, how to set economic priorities so as to make our businesses and industries more productive, how to redistribute a part of the national income to those in need.

As for the present, the econmy is clearly in need of stimulation, a fact recognized by the Bank of Canada in its three recent reductions in interest rates. It was also recognized finally recently by Finance Minister Macdonald when he said he was considering bringing in a federal budget earlier than planned in order to pump some new life into the economy and get the unemployed back to work.

But without controls, this needed spur may only unleash the forces of inflation again, setting off the chain reaction that will invite another regime of tight money, higher unemployment and more wasted resources.

The controls are not perfect, and they're not totally fair. But if we drop them now, before we have figured out a better way to make the system work, everyone will suffer.

City Where Murder is Acceptable Solution

By LARRY McMURTRY

(Novelist McMurtry wrote this review of Murder in Space City, by Henry P. Lunsgaarde, published by Oxford, for the New York Times Book Review)

Houston is not invariably the per capita murder capital of America — New York and Detroit sometimes outstrip it — but it is always up there in the running. It has been a continuously booming city for 25 years, and among the things that have boomed continuously during this time are guns, before whom literally thousands of Houston citizens have fallen dead.

Apologists for the city like to underplay its violence. A self-righteous citizenry rose up in protest a few years ago, when a BBC news team put together what was in my view a rather understated program on what might be called the gun life of the city. The protest subsided, and the guns continued to boom. More recently, the same citizenry has been confronted by a brilliant work of reportage, Thomas Thompson's recent book, "Blood and Money," in which by dramatizing a single set of crimes the reporter demonstrated the existence of a strong taste for violent solutions among upper- and well as lower-class Houstonians.

Now comes Prof. Henry P. Lundsgaarde. It is a great pity that those mostly disadvantaged citizens who keep pulling the triggers are not equipped to read his provocative, I might say definitive, study, "Murder in Space City." Professor Lundsgaarde is an anthropologist; like many a visitor to Houston, he was struck by the variety and overabundance of its violent crime. Eventually, he came back to study it, bringing with him a very sophisticated conceptual tool kit.

To Professor Lundsgaarde, there is always more to murder than meets the eye, but the clues he seeks are not such as would appeal to readers of whodunits. As he points out, in Houston it is usually blatantly apparent who the killer is. About 90 per cent of Houston's homicides are solved almost at once; in most cases the killer simply hands his smoking gun to the nearest police officer.

The clues that Professor Lundsgaarde seeks to find and interpret are the often buried cultural patterns which sustain and possibly even promote violence as a solution to personal problems. Homicide, as he sees it, is a cultural act, whether it takes place in the modern city or a primitive tribe. In Texas, as his analysis makes clear, homicide is in many situations a privileged, and perhaps a preferred, solution, with strong sanctions in the Texas legal code.

Plainly, the violence projected by members of the uneducated classes on their intimates described in these pages is not seen as threatening to the overall viability of Texas society — nor for that matter is violence committed in the defence of property. This broad tolerance may stem from a still pervasive frontier individualism, though Professor Lundsgaarde is cautious on that point. What he does feel is that the presumed forces of light in Texas — legislators, judges, administrators — have so far done nothing legally, socially or structurally to alter these problems of violence. No clear rewards, psychic or otherwise, await the pacific in Texas.

Of the 268 reported homicides in 1969 some remain legally unresolved, but the statistics Professor Lundsgaarde extracts from those that have been resolved are fascinating. Seventy-seven of the killings were family affairs, 68 were instances of friend-killing friend, and in 55 instances killer and victim were strangers. It was in the latter category — the killing of strangers — that by far the severest legal penalties were levied. About 61 per cent of those who killed relatives escaped any form of legal penalty, as did more than half of those who killed friends, and, in these two categories, when penalties were eventually levied they were quite mild. Wives killed husbands about twice as often as husbands killed wives — Texas women may not be particularly good shots but they do know how to empty guns; and parents who killed children had an easier time escaping punishment than children who killed parents.

Professor Lundsgaarde's analysis is too subtle and too many-faceted to be easily summarized, but the heart of it is that when all is said and done violence is rather broadly acceptable to Texans as a solution to domestic disagreement, and even more acceptable if it is committed in defence of property.

Liked the Book, Hated the Jacket

I must have been about 40 pages into Charlton Ogburn's latest book The Adventure of Birds (Case, $12.95) when I figured I'd been led down the garden path. But, I'd nobody to blame but myself; I'd committed an unpardonable sin in book reviewing; I'd red the dust jacket. Worse still, I'd believed what I'd read.

If there is such a thing as a first rule of book reviewing, and I'm prepared to propose the following if there isn't, it should be "He who goes by what he reads on the dust jacket of a book, shall be damned to disappointment every time!"

So it was for me with The Adventure of Birds. Not since I first read Peterson and Fisher's Wild America back in 1955, had I looked forward with such anticipation to a session with a new book on my favourite avocation. I guess I set myself up for this one on two counts; first, the aforesaid indiscretion; second, my longing for a good old fashioned adventure yarn about birds and birding. I so wanted The Adventure of Birds to be such a book. After all, didn't the title suggest something?

But it was the dust jacket that really did the damage. Here was Eliot Porter, one of North America's premier bird photographers, and Hal Borland, with an equal reputation as a writer on things outdoors, using such words as "tingling excitement; uncontainable pleasure; one of the best bird books I have read in a long time" to describe the book. No wonder I was looking forward to The Adventure of Birds with more than the usual anticipation.

Even Ogburn's reputation (he'd won a John Burrough's medal for an earlier book The Winter Beach) had played its part. But all this went for naught. By Page 42, under a title The Division of The Avian Treasure I capitulated, put the book away for a week, and tried to rethink the whole debacle.

It was a good thing I did because the thinking exposed my mistake but, more important, it suggested a solution. Why not ignore, or try to ignore, other people's evaluations and, this time, read the book without the preconceptions generated by that mistake, and judge the work on its own merit.

The result? The Adventure of Birds is a good, basic, interesting synthesis of much of what is known about birds today. It is a book that is seldom exciting, usually pleasurable, but hardly one of the best books on birds I have read.

But I'm glad I stayed with it because, once I got over my initial disappointment, I found that there was much to recommend the book, particularly in its second half.

Part one of The Adventure of Birds is devoted to a general overview of the nature of birds, their distribution over the earth, and their influence on men's lives. Such things as flight, senses, feathers — even language — are considered, often philosophically as well as technically.

This part of the book comes off rather poorly, partly I think because of the scope of the subject. Admittedly, as introductions to these often complex aspects of avian natural history, they fare somewhat better, particularly when the extensive list of additional reading is considered. Readers whose interest is stimulated by Ogburn's introductions can, through his bibliography, delve as deeply into the subject as their enthusiasm takes them.

But in Part two, titled Birds Through the Year, Ogburn begins to reveal his potential. I got the feeling that if he had begun his book here, and ignored his material of the first part, his Adventure of Birds and I could have become close friends. As it is, half a book is certainly better than no book at all.

The success of Part Two is due in no small measure to its more personal nature. Here Ogburn, with his own feelings and reactions in his experiences with birds, is on surer ground. Working through the seasons (he makes a good case for starting with summer), he describes the seasons and their effect both on him and on the birds he so obviously enjoys watching and studying.

By the time he had progressed through autumn and winter and approached spring, Ogburn was winning me over. And with spring, The Glorious but Uncertain Coming, I fell into line. The line that did it was: "Who that has been through a northern winter can ever forget the balm of the first signs of spring?"

If this little dissertation leaves you with the feeling that I haven't really made up my mind about The Adventure of Birds you're right. I have an idea this book will grow on me with familiarity but one thing for sure, I've tossed away its dust jacket.

TAX TIP

Q. In 1976 I received a scholarship of $1,200. Do I include the full amount as income on my income tax return?

A. No. The first $500 received as a bursary, scholarship or fellowship are exempt.

Not All Ski Operators Want Government's Aid

VANCOUVER (CP) – Ski operators who can not meet their financial obligations are at fault themselves and the provincial government shouldn't offer to help, says Earl Pletch, owner of Mount Seymour chairlift.

Pletch was commenting on Economic Development Minister Don Phillips' promise "to try to come up with something" to help the B.C. ski industry which has been suffering from poor snow conditions this winter.

If a ski operator is short of money and can't get financing from a bank, then it's poor management on his own part," Pletch said in an interview. "The strong make it and the weak fail. That's what life's all about."

Mount Seymour, Cypress and Manning provincial parks have been closed for skiing this winter due to the lack of snowfall.

"Sure I'm hurting but I think everybody in this industry should be able to weather one bad year," Pletch said.

He would not disclose how much money he has lost this season.

"I own this company so it's my own business and nobody else's," he said.

"Franz Wilhelmsen, president of Garibaldi Lifts, which has lost about $500,000 in revenue this winter, also feels the provincial government should not offer assistance to the industry.

"We are free enterprisers and in good years or bad years, we should take care of ourselves," Wilhelmsen said. "Volume of business is down but our company is not in any financial difficulties. Whistler was closed for three weeks but we are back in full operation.

But most ski operators are welcoming government assistance.

"Any assistance, from the government in the form of low interest loans or whatever would be a tremendous help to all of us," said Peter Mackay-Smith, owner of Tod Mountain recreation ski resort near Kamloops.

Mackay-Smith said lack of snow this winter has pushed his resort into receivership.

Jim McCoskey, owner of the Whistler Mountain Ski Shop and School, said, "A lot of people are going to be in serious trouble unless the provincial government acts quickly."

McConkey said business is down 95 per cent this winter and he has been forced to lay off 19 of his 21-member staff.

Snow conditions now are improving and McConkey is hopeful that business will pick up.

The blue chair, green chair and T-bar are operating and skiing is good in alpine areas, he said.

Grouse Mountain still is closed for skiing but resort president John Hoegg has come up with a new project to help carry the company through the year.

It is called the '$9.95 dinner flight' which offers a round-trip on the lift and dinner in the Grouse Nest Restaurant.

"We're trying to be as innovative as possible and create a product the public would find interesting at this time of the year," Hoegg said. "The response has been tremendous."

But his company has already cost about $1 million in revenue this winter.

"It's a very serious loss and I think it is appropriate that the provincial government has become cognisant of the health of the private sector," he said.

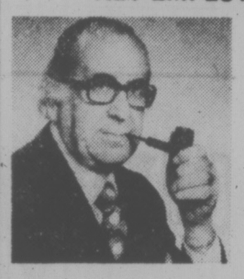
What does the LOSS of a KEY EMPLOYEE mean to you?



Every business has a key employee — you, the owner, principal shareholder, or one or more of your employees. The loss or absence of one of these due to death or disability means increased expenses or a decrease in business income. Key employees, your most valuable asset, should be insured by the business with Key Executive Life Insurance. I can help you with your planning. Call me.

CASE EXISTOLOGICAL LABORATORIES LTD.

Mr. John N. Case, P.Eng., President of Case Existological Laboratories Ltd. is please to announce the addition of the following personnel to the company.

KARL P. KUCHNOW — Ph.D. Marine Biologist

A graduate in Honors Biology, with a B.Sc. from McMaster University, Hamilton, Ontario in 1963 and a Ph.D. degree in Marine Biology from Scripps Institution of Oceanography, La Jolla, California in 1967.

Following two years as a NATO Postdoctoral Fellow at the Stazione Zoologica, in Napoli, Italia, Dr Kuchnow joined the staff at the Biology Department at Texas A&M University from 1970-1976.

Dr Kuchnow has numerous scientific publications dealing with shark visual systems and fish embryogenesis.

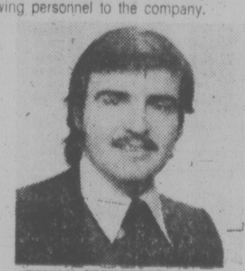
He joins C.E.L.L. as a member of the Ocean Engineering team. His duties include co-ordination of biological and environmental phases of C.E.L.L. activities as well as special advisor on projects involving oceanographic, hydrographic and Scientific Instrumentation

ERIC J. DAWSON, P.Eng., F.I.Mar.E., M.I. Mech.E.

Mr Dawson comes to us with a wealth of experience gained during 32 years of service as a Marine Engineering officer in the Royal Canadian Navy. He retired from the Navy in 1974 as a Captain (N), his last position being Manager of Ship Repair at the Esquimalt Dockyard.

After receiving his early education in B.C. schools, Mr. Dawson obtained his formal engineering education at the Royal Naval Engineering College in England, graduating in 1949.

In addition to several years as a Chief Engineer at sea, he has been closely associated with most of the Navy's major ship design and construction projects over the last 20 years, including the recently completed gas turbine destroyer program, of which he was the Program Manager for 3 years.



TONY V. FERNANDEZ, P.Eng.

After graduating from McGill University, Montreal, in 1973 with a Bachelor's Degree in Civil Engineering, Mr. Fernandez assumed a two-year position as project engineer for the construction of a large television studio complex in Kingston, Jamaica. Upon completion in 1975, Mr. Fernandez returned to Canada and was employed with Dominion Bridge as Contract Engineer in their re-bar and post-tensioning department until November, 1976.

Past experience includes construction supervision, studies of low cost prefabricated concrete modular housing systems, as well as other aspects of reinforced and post-tensioned concrete design and construction.

His duties with C.E.L.L. will be involved with post-tensioning and reinforced concrete structures.

SC Fears Pink Tinge In Educated: Macdonald

A memorandum issued by Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy reveals the "anti-intellectual, anti-cultural bent of (the) government," Alex MacDonald (NDP—Vancouver East) said Friday.

The former attorney-general said Mrs. McCarthy's memo shows the government is "afraid of anybody with a university degree because they might be to the (political) left of Genghis Khan."

Mrs. McCarthy confirmed Wednesday she sent a memo to cabinet ministers suggesting that when consultants are being hired preference be given to persons from private enterprise instead of university professors.

The memo had appeared the previous day in a newspaper and Mrs. McCarthy said an investigation into how it was leaked was being considered.

She said one of the main reasons for her opposition to hiring professors is that they are in the public employ and hiring them would mean double funding.

MacDonald said this attitude is hypocritical, because, he said, B.C. Hydro chairman Robert Bonner gets a pension from MacMillan Bloedel of about $60,000 a year plus a $50,000 salary from Hydro.

List Wife, B.C. Tel Urged

Alex Macdonald, NDP MLA for Vancouver East said Friday telephone listings should inelude the given names of both a husband and wife without extra charge.

Macdonald said the only way a wife can get her name in the book now is by paying extra for a separate listing. He said that is discrimination by the telephone company, which, he said, treats women as non-persons.

Macdonald's idea is contained in a private member's bill, which, like most private member's bills, will likely die on the order paper.

'LAZY' CHARGES POLITICS: BCGEU

The general secretary of the B.C. Government Employees Union said Friday that Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm is attacking government employees for political purposes.

John Fryer was commenting on Vander Zalm's statement that he plans to weed out lazy government workers who are not "pulling their weight."

"Vander Zalm, by his vague accusations, has placed every public employee in the provincial service under a cloud of suspicion and has seriously impaired efforts by the union and responsible management to maintain morale in the provincial work force," he said.

Bennett Queries Pipe Plan

Premier Bill Bennett said Friday he has not made up his mind on whether to support the proposed Kitimat pipeline.

Bennett said that "on first blush" he could see no benefit to B.C. from the proposal, but that the government has initiated studies into it.

The pipeline would accept tanker-transported Alaskan oil to Kitimat on B.C.'s northern coast and pump it to Edmonton, there it would be distributed through existing channels.

The premier said the province's position on the pipeline may hinge on how much tanker traffic from Alaska there is to refineries in the Cherry Point, Wash., area.

Under former governor Dan Evans, Washington State had been de-emphasizing the Cherry Point proposals, but new Governor Dixie Lee Ray indicated earlier this week that they may play a major role.

Bennett said there may be trade-offs involved which would see the Kitimat plan receiving backing if the Cherry Point plan were downgraded.

He said the government will make its position known when the National Energy Board of Canada holds its hearings on the pipeline.

Alex MacDonald (NDP—Vancouver East) said he finds it surprising the the premier still hasn't got a position on the pipeline.

"You're going to intervene (in the hearings), but you don't know your position," he said.

Strata 'Loophole' Plugged

The provincial cabinet moved Friday to close a loophole in land legislation that allowed developers to subdivide property under the Strata Titles Act without filing adequate disclosures.

A cabinet order now requires a prospectus be filed when a subdivision is created by a strata plan.

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis said the intent of the order is to give "full particulars on subdivision plans and will complement amendments to the Strata Titles Act intended later in the session."

Disclosures, for subdivisions of five or more lots by strata plan, will be filed with the superintendent of insurance. Copies must be made available to purchasers.

Curtis, who announced the move on behalf of Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Rafe Mair, said more comprehensive legislation to cover the problem will be brought in later.

He described Friday's amendments as a "large band-aid" designed to slow down the "indiscriminate stratifying of land."

The move came after Jim Smith, acting planning director for the Cariboo Regional District, complained about three strata subdivisions in that district.

Smith said the loophole allowed developers to bypass authorities such as the ministry of highways, fish and wildlife branch and regional health districts.

"It fouls up the whole process and we would have no control over the development," said Smith. "It is reprehensible."

He said the developer would not have had to meet standards for roads he builds or provide for public access to water as he must under The Land Act.

Rhodesia Peace Seeker Crosland Dies

LONDON (AP) — British Foreign Secrefary Anthony Crosland, who was working on a solution to the Rhodesia crisis when he collapsed from a stroke last Sunday, died early today at the age of 58.

The foreign office announced that Crosland, who had been in a coma since Monday, died peacefully at Oxford Radcliffe Infirmary. His wife and her family were at his bedside when he died.

Crosland, foreign secretary since last April, had been engaged in the most vital work of his political career.

He was co-ordinating efforts to obtain black majority rule in the rebel British colony of Rhodesia; he was negotiating the fishing limits of Europe's offshore waters, and he was chairman of the Common Market ministers' meetings in Brussels.

Crosland went for a walk last Sunday before returning to his Oxford country home to settle down to work.

"Susan, something has happened," he told his wife.

He was rushed to the hospital where his condition worsened in what doctors called a progressive stroke. He had been listed as dangerously ill since Monday and family sources said he suffered massive brain damage.

Mrs. Crosland, an Americanborn journalist who writes under the name Susan Barnes, said her husband had always been a hard worker. "He would not have wanted to live any other way."

Tributes began to pour in after Crosland's death was announced.

Prime Minister James Callaghan said: "I am deeply saddened by the tragic death of Tony Crosland. For 30 years he was a close colleague and friend and a major political figure whose death is a great loss to the government, the country and the Labor party."

Crosland was to have accompanied Callaghan to Washington next month for a meeting with President Jimmy Carter, and was planning this summer's British Commonwealth conference in London.

Crosland, born Aug. 29, 1918, was the son of a senior civil servant and an honors graduate at Oxford University in philosophy, politics and economics. He served in the Second World War as a paratroop captain.

First elected to Parliament in 1950, he became junior minister for economic affairs in 1964 and joined former prime minister Harold Wilson's cabinet as education secretary in 1965.

His cabinet posts after that included the ministries of environment and local government.

While serving as foreign secretary, he also held the post of president of the European Common Market's decision-making council of ministers.

Crosland's first marriage in 1952 ended in divorce five years later. In 1964, he married Susan Watson. He had no children by either marriage.

Crosland won his reputation as Labor's theoretician with such books as Britain's Economic Problem, The Conservative Enemy and Socialism Now. Best known is The Future of Socialism, published in 1956.

Critics in and out of the Labor party accused him of speaking like a Socialist and living like a capitalist. As evidence they cited his $119,000 London home and $68,000 country retreat near the university town of Oxford, 55 miles northwest of London.

Nanaimo Robbery

NANAIMO (CP) — RCMP are investigating the disappearance of $5,700 from a safe in the Queens Hotel in downtown Nanaimo Thursday night. Police said there was about $1,400 in cash in the safe. The rest was in cheques.

Use Pulp Taxes For Mills—Dave

The provincial government should demand that the forest industry invest its profits in the province by building two new pulp mills, NDP leader Dave Barrett said Friday.

Barrett told the legislature the private sector is not being challenged by the government and is being lazy in the use of the people's resources.

Barrett recommended a tax of at least $10 a ton be placed on pulp and that this money be used to construct the mills.

He said two mills would create about 30,000 jobs both directly and indirectly.

Barrett's remarks were made in a wide-ranging attack on the leadership of Premier Bill Bennett during debate on executive council spending estimates.

Barrett, premier from 1972 to 1975, attacked Bennett for bragging that it costs only 28 cents per British Columbian to run the executive council.

The opposition leader said it was an indication of the "gross mentality of this government" to give such a "clerical review" and not address important problems.

"We've seen in 15 months a vacuum by this government on its . . . philosophy," said Barrett. "I find it somewhat incredible."

CALGARY (CP) — The Myrna McQuarrie rink of Lethbridge won the Alberta women's curling championship with an extra-end, 3-2 triumph over Gail Lee of Edmonton is a sudden-death playoff game. The rinks had finished in a tie after round-robin play.

GAINING TIME

In all important chess events, both participants in a game get 2½ hours time on their chess clocks. In that time, they must make 40 moves. If one does not, he loses the game. In the following game from the Madrid International, played in December of 1973, you see Viastimil Hort of Czechoslovakia repeating a number of moves. He does so in order to gain moves on his clock!! True, he avoids getting the same position for the third time — as then his opponent, when on the move, could claim a draw.

THE VIRTUE OF PRACTICE

Dr. Adolph Anderssen, an early World Champion, wrote the following right after the 1858 match he lost to Paul Morphy, in Paris.

"It is impossible to keep one's excellence in a glass casket, like a jewel, to take out whenever wanted. On the contrary, it can only be conserved by continuous and good practice."

Houseboaters Happy Despite Gov't Indifference

By AB KENT
Times Staff

A lucky group of Esquimalt people have found a kind of waterfront nirvana that given a chance, could help shape future housing for coast dwellers.

Vancouver think-tank founder Frank Ogden believes float houses could solve the housing crisis for persons with a taste for this unique life-style.

Unfortunately, no government has adopted a policy to recognize and encourage floating homes, as an alternative to land-gobbling single family accommodation.

The occupants of 14 floating homes at West Bay Marina, 453 Head, are the only legal houseboat dwellers on southern Vancouver Island.

Municipalities, it appears, don't want float homes and unorganized areas have no such zoning.

Even in Esquimalt the float homes are barely tolerated. Council would like to see the end of them and nearby land-dwellers consider them a blight.

There are no sewer connections for floating homes and development is limited to 14. Meanwhile, West Bay Marina, the landlord, is having financial problems.

The uncertain future is a strong disadvantage to living afloat, according to 35-year-old Carl Smith, who built his home for $20,000 three years ago and remains delighted with it.

Only the doubts of council and other land dwellers about the float home style of life detract from its enjoyment, Smith said.

Formerly a welder, Smith recently bought a commercial fishing vessel, so he, his wife Phyllis and son Steven are not as committed to a fixed location.

They can tow their home to any up-coast private cove that pleases them.

The first Vancouver float dwellers and some in Victoria's Lime Bay or up the Gorge, were squatters on public foreshore and tended to give floating communities a bad name.

But Seattle has a 70-year history of permanent float housing on Lake Union where there are some 300 residents and many imposing structures. About 200 people live on the water along the Willamette River in Portland and there are floating communities in Sausilito and Berkeley in San Francisco Bay.

All are taxed and treated as conventional residential properties.

Virtually all the urban float homes in B.C. are in the Lower Mainland — in Coal Harbor and North Vancouver on Burrard Inlet, and in suburban Richmond. Some have plans for sewer systems.

Overseas, floating homes are well-known on the River Thames, in Holland, India and the Orient.

They are often boats rather than permanent homes on floats.

Mel Kristian, co-owner of a 20 x 30 - foot floating cottage at West Bay said the sea has always been taken for granted here as a means of livelihood or transportation and recreation but never as a permanent place to live.

Shore people tend to suspect those who express a preference for living afloat. People who live on boats are freaks, the way trailer people once were considered.

What difference is there between living afloat and living in a house overlooking the sea?

"One is just a view. The other, you are actually a living part of the water," she said. "We have our pets (aside from two cats and the several dogs of neighboring float folk) — the ducks come up to be fed every day.

"We love it. It is definitely an alternative life style.

"A float home is so much a part of nature itself. When the wind blows, all the bells start ringing on the fish boats at the marina. The scene changes daily.

"There is very much of a community feeling down here. The people are individualistic but there is still a close feeling and help when you need it. You also learn to cope with things."

Like boat-owners, floaters become self-reliant, able to repair plumbing, do their own painting, handyman jobs, carry garbage ashore, bring fuel oil aboard and generally look out for each other.

J. T. Silva, 27, another welder, recently married Christine, 23, a psychiatric nurse. They would have had difficulty obtaining a conventional urban home because of cost and scarcity.

He asked where else they could obtain their own place for a total $16,000 and a bank put up the money.

They are five minutes from downtown, have no garden to maintain or grass to cut, the community is pleasant, the atmosphere peaceful and the outlook interesting.

The Silvas have lived afloat almost a year and are really enjoying it.

"There are really nice people around here."

Among the neighbors are a school teacher and practical nurse.

To Silva the biggest thing is the tranquillity.

"It is so peaceful all around, especially in the evenings. There is no traffic noise and even the airplanes in the harbor are over quickly."

The homes are tidy and there is no evidence of pollution.

Among the float families there are a total of eight children, mostly in four homes moored on the southeast side of the marina. The rest, with one exception, are moored together on the northwest side and are reached by a separate gangway.

The Smith home—the only one mounted on steel floats—is among the most comfortable.

A visitor steps through a Dutch door into a tiny, galley-like kitchen cozy with the aroma of fresh baking and decorated with macrame hangings and plants.

Further in, warm furnishings, leaded glass panes, a small loft with its own window.

Float houses reflect a special flavor unlike most land-based dwellings. They are reminiscent of an alpine village in design, in generous use of cedar inside and out and in their closeness and charm.

There is surprisingly little of the marine motif probably because neighboring boats, docks and waterfront speak for themselves.

Janet Ker owns a shuttered, two-storey home with striking shake roof and projecting dormer. A winding staircase leads from a modern living room to the sleeping area.

Next door an A-frame thrusts mast-high, and inside behind sliding glass doors, a ship's ladder provides access to a loft.

In the next row, a one-of-a-kind design has long, narrow, vertical windows and skylights for maximum privacy.

Most homes are supported on floats of fibreglass-covered plywood and wooden deck lashed securely to moored floats with concrete sidewalks and street lights, electric wiring and PVC water connections.

Oil stoves are favored for cooking and heating. Some use propane. All have marine toilets that flush directly into the sea.

The marina charges 17 cents a square foot monthly moorage which works out to about $110 for a typical single floor cottage. There are no taxes.

Esquimalt has tried to overcome this by considering float homes to be improvements on the marina property. Last year part of the assessment was allocated to floating homes for the first time.

West Bay receiver-manager Terry McMullen said the action was appealed, but the matter has bogged down and indications are that in the meantime the practice will continue.

Efforts to dispose of the marina are being pursued and float home owners have been told the assessment problem will ultimately be theirs.

The irony is that float homeowners would like to be taxed and enjoy all the privileges and responsibilities of property owners ashore.

But so far, the provincial government has ignored their pleas, even though legislation has recognized the once-despised mobile home owner.

"Someone's going to have to come to grips with the problem," McMullen said. He concedes perhaps the float home concept does not go hand in glove with marinas and requires special areas.

Esquimalt Mayor Art Young said council is disturbed because the original marina concept at West Bay has not been achieved. It was intended to make moorage attractive to visiting boaters for short-term periods of living aboard, he said.

The area is intended for marine-oriented public enjoyment and general marina purposes and a Capital Improvement District project is on progress nearby to provide park, walkways, decking and planted areas.

Young said he personally opposes float homes in Esquimalt because public access waterfront is at a premium and boat owners deserve first call.

Float home dwellers point out that their homes do not occupy potential boat moorage because water depth is too shallow.

Although municipal jurisdiction extends 1,000 feet offshore, foreshore land is owned by the Crown (federal) and leased to the marina. The federal government has no quarrel with float homes.

Charles Brooks, Ministry of Transport administrator, knows of no moves between the three levels of government towards making life afloat an easier proposition.

He notes the style of living in vessels that are intended for accommodation is becoming more attractive due to the ever-increasing price of land.

"I personally think, why not? But you may not be able to live where you want."

Esquimalt's assessment action poses some bizarre questions. What would happen if the homes are towed away from the marina?

"It boggles the mind" that a marina operator may be left with the taxpaying responsibility for something departed, said McMullen.

Or if the operator kicks out float home tenants as the economics of keeping the marina afloat diminish? Where do they go?

"Will they just be towed into the harbor and cut loose?"

Maybe the municipality would fall heir to the houses if they are seized for taxes. What then?

A Vancouver marina operator, Graham Clarke, of Harbor Ferries in Coal Harbor, has five float homes at moorage, plus many boats with people living aboard. He will not accept new float dwellers.

He said this is because the city doesn't like them and they tend to look "shanty-like after a while," and because they take foreshore away from boaters.

"Floating houses don't have a big future here. There is a great demand on waterfront and a finite amount of waterfront. I feel the waterfront is for boats."

Vancouver, with plans to install sewerage, has the nearest thing in B.C. to taxation of float homes. It charges a marina a licence fee for each liveaboard or float home, based on length.

Rates jumped 38 per cent this year and start at $199 rising to more than $300 a year for big vessels. North Vancouver also has designated places for floaters, but Richmond, like Esquimalt, wants them out.

'Float' Act to Sink?

A bill introduced at the current sitting of the legislature would make float home owners subject to taxation and eligible for grants and mortgage help.

But it is a private member's bill — not sponsored by the government — and likely to die on the order paper.

Socred Stephen Rogers, of Vancouver South, brought in the Floating Homes Regulation Act which would allow the cabinet to make regulations dealing with taxation, assessment and other aspects of living on the water.

Owners would get the provincial home owner grant and home acquisition assistance, while their property would be assessed and taxed under the Municipal, School and Taxation Acts and the Vancouver Charter.

The bill defines a floating home as any dwelling which floats or a vessel acting permanently or temporarily as a residence.

Ironically, the organization which fought for several years for recognition of float homes — Greater Vancouver Floating Home Co-operative — appears to have folded.

PLANE IN MALL MAKES SOS CALL

A $2,200 search and rescue mission ended Friday evening with the discovery that a "downed plane" was on display in the Hillside Shopping Mall.

The search, which lasted more than an hour, was launched after somebody triggered the emergency locator transmitter of the Cessna, part of an aeronautical display at the centre.

A CFB Comox Buffalo was sent up after the ELT was armed and tripped shortly before 4 p.m., presumably by one of the many visitors to the display.

By 4:20 p.m., the search and rescue plane was in the air and the ELT signal was tracked down to the mall an hour later.

Search and Rescue officials were not amused.

Victoria Flying Club, owners of the aircraft, will get a letter of reprimand from the ministry of transport.

The false alarm was the 37th this year caused by an ELT but few result in an actual search operation.

A rescue centre spokesman said ELTs can be jolted into operation by a hard landing or by accidentally being left "armed" after a flight.

'War' Feared In Cab Ranks

Independent cabbie Tony Lambert claims big cab companies are putting pressure on one-man outfits and he predicts there could be violence.

But spokesmen for two of Victoria's larger taxi companies today denied there is a conspiracy to push small taxi firms out of the business.

Lambert, of Empress Cabs, said Friday a taxi war with smashed windshields, dented fenders and slashed tires could result unless city council comes to the aid of small firms being squeezed by the big boys.

Lambert claims a successful appeal by the Greater Victoria Taxi Owners' Association to have city hall approve a 25 per cent fare increase will kill the taxi business in the city.

The GVTOA represents several large companies in the city and has asked the city to recognize it as the industry's spokesman.

Council wants more information before considering the GVTOA fare increase request.

A dispatcher for one GVTOA company said a fare increase will benefit everyone in the business.

He discounted the suggestion of a taxi war. "In a small town like Victoria, almost everyone co-operates."

Lambert also accused the larger taxi firms of strongly supporting parts of the city's new taxi bylaw which Lambert claims discriminate against smaller firms.

The revent bylaw stipulates every taxi company that wants to operate in the city must have an office in the city.

Lambert said neither he nor any of the small operators could afford a city office.

The large firms already had offices in the city and wouldn't be affected by that part of the bylaw, he said.

Lambert said city hall also plays into the hands of the large companies by not permitting small operators stands at hotels.

Lambert said he lived through a taxi war in Toronto in the mid-50s and does not want to see another. But he warns it could happen if the larger companies pushed the independents too far.

Two Escape Fire But Boat Gutted

Two persons had to jump overboard when a cabin cruiser caught fire Friday night as it pulled away from the dock at Van Isle Marina in Sidney.

Sidney RCMP said Kenneth Provan, of 2001-614 Michigan, and Eric Christensen, 17, of 3360 Rolston, had stopped at the dock just before 10 p.m. to get fuel for their 23-foot boat.

While there, they inadvertently spilled some gas on the engine compartment and shroud.

They cleaned up the spillage, pushed off, started the engine and got about 50 feet when the engine exploded in flame.

Police said the pair tried to put out the blaze but were forced to jump overboard.

Jim Earl, a Central Saanich police officer who was working on his boat nearby, saw what happened and towed the blazing boat away from the dock.

Sidney firemen attended but were unable to save the boat which burned to the waterline.

Police said Provan received minor burns to his leg. Christensen was not hurt.

Faithful Franks Deserve Most Valuable Fan Award

Took in my first hockey game of the season last Saturday night.

By now you can tell I'm not what you'd call a faithful fan, but boy, what a wow of an evening I had!

My small daughter and I were treated to a classic encounter, with the Victoria Cougars scoring 12 seconds from the end to salvage a 5-5 tie with Portland Winter Hawks; I was delighted that, after all the bad incidents, there wasn't a single scrap; and I met John Frank and his wife Peggy.

Peggy and John . . . watching the fun

Now there are fans for you! They are so loyal to the Cougars that they never miss a game, unless they are so sick they can't struggle down to Memorial Arena — and Peggy is 78 and John will be 92 in April.

After watching the Ottawa Senators play hockey while he worked in the east for the Department of Veterans' Affairs in the early 1920s, John Frank moved to Victoria in 1923 and became one of the Cougars' first fans.

He followed them from the moment they got started, stayed with them while they became the Victoria Maple Leafs for a while — though he admits with a grin that he didn't like the name — and he has faithfully followed the modern Cougars in the junior Western Canada Hockey League.

"I remember watching the Cougars win the Stanley Cup here in 1925 in the old wooden rink where Saunders and Hitchman now stands," John says. "I made $10 on that one. Bet a guy in Duncan the Cougars would win."

Peggy, too, has long been a keen fan and started watching the game in New York in 1925. Together they have sat in seats one and two in row E of section 32 (right behind the visiting team's bench) for "years and years."

Hockey. They love it. The speed, the thrills. They're there in every game. You couldn't get anything more exciting for spectators, they'll tell you.

Yet, perhaps a little ironically . . . John Frank can't even skate!

Born on April 15, 1885, in the little seaside town of Worthing in Sussex, he was brought up in the English tradition of rugby and cricket. And he remembers his only brief flirtation with the art of skating was going out on to a frozen pond with a pair of borrowed skates and a chair.

Yet as soon as he came to Canada in 1908, John Frank became captivated by hockey. He watched it wherever he could: on the Prairies, in Ottawa and finally in Victoria where he was in the insurance business until 1946.

Today, when people meet John Frank they find it hard to believe he's almost 92. He looks in his 70s but when people doubt him, just like the 20-year-old who has trouble getting in a beer parlor, he whips out his driver's licence.

That's right, he still drives his car! And so does Peggy. In fact, only two weeks ago they ended 20 years of driving blind people to the White Cane Club for the CNIB.

So what's the secret, John?

Well, he admits, he has kept active. He has always been a keen gardener and still tends it regularly in the summer.

"But I don't do eight hours like I used to," he says.

The secret, says Peggy, is that he "doesn't sit." Every fine day he walks two miles along the Gorge, where he lives, and then goes home and cycles five miles on his exercise bike. Well, that's more than 90 per cent of us do, John.

And what about the game of hockey today?

Well, it's faster, he says — but there is far more violence and this is spoiling it.

"Yes, we're terribly upset by the violence," says Peggy. "It's very, very distressing."

Today in the National Hockey League there's not much violence and when they have an East versus West game in the WCHL there's no fighting, John says.

"So why do we have to have it in junior club games?"

This longest of long-time hockey fans is angered by the flare-ups and says the only way to curb them is to fine the coaches as well as the players.

Yet — John Frank would never be negative about the game he loves so much, for about the young players who he has come to regard so highly.

British Copters Flying with Bogus Parts

LONDON (WP) — The British Army is knowingly flying up to 200 light helicopters containing "suspect" parts from an American supplier, it was learned Friday.

A defence ministry spokesman acknowledged that components in the Sioux helicopters have been falsely labelled. He insisted that "none of these components affect flight safety" and therefore the vehicles have not been grounded.

The Sioux's British maker, however, disclosed that the bogus part is the drive assembly supplying power to the tail rotor.

"If they failed," he said, "it could have a serious effect on the flight safety of the helicopter."

The Sioux, which is used by British forces in Northern Ireland, needs two rotors to stay aloft. Failure in one would probably bring down the craft with two-man crew.

The Washington Post also learned Friday that the West German government is investigating the alleged bogus helicopter parts scheme and that in 1971 the German defence ministry suspended direct business dealings with Aviation Sales Corp., a New York manufacturer that allegedly has sold millions of dollars worth of bogus parts.

According to West German government spokesmen in Bonn and Washington, the action was taken after the defence ministry bought replacement parts for the F104 jet fighter from Aviation sales through a West German company call Flugzug union. The parts turned out not to be the authentic, name-brand parts that they purported to be.

According to figures supplied recently by the Lockheed Aircraft Corp. in Los Angeles, there have been 178 crashes involving F-104s made in West Germany and flown by West German pilots. Many of the crashes have never been satisfactorily explained, West German officials said.

The principal source for the information about Britain's Sioux helicopters was John Teague, public relations executive for Westland Aircraft in Yeovil. Westland is the sole maker of the Sioux for Britain and, through the ministry of defence, sells them to foreign armies.

Teague said that Bell and Westland inspectors, alerted since early January, discovered that the identification numbers on the tail rotor's drive assembly had been "altered." In effect, he said, the altered number falsely identified the part as meeting new and stiffer specifications to give it a longer life.

Tel Earnings Increase

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Telephone Co. reports net earnings after taxes and extraordinary items of $27,785,000 for the year ended Dec. 31, compared with earnings of $26,859,000 the year before.

The company says in an interim report released Friday that earnings for the last quarter were $6,163,000, down from the $10,291,000 recorded in the same period of 1975.

Fully diluted earnings per ordinary share after extraordinary itmes was $1.45 for the year, compared with $1.43 for 1975. The quarterly earnings was 32 cents a share compared with 55 cents for the comparative quarter the year before.

Gordon MacFarlane, newly-elected to the position of company chairman, said in the report that the economic recovery that was to occur during 1976 did not materialize to the extent anticipated, "with the result that the company's financial performance for the year fell somewhat short of earlier expectations."

The company's return on its average invested capital in 1976 amounted to 8.93 per cent, compared with 8.62 per cent in 1975.

MacFarlane said the earnings for the last quarter are evidence "of a seriously declining earnings trend as revenues failed to increase in line with operating expenses and costs of servicing invested capital."

"Faced with a serious and growing impairment to its earnings, the company on Dec. 10, 1976, filed an application with the CRTC (Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission) for a general rate increase," the report said.

"At the same time, approval was sought for an interim rate increase pending a full public hearing and the commission's decison on the main application."

The commission has rejected the interim increase but has said the public hearing would likely go ahead in March.

The company said it was proceeding with an issue of 1.6 million additional preferred shares totalling $40 million and each having a dividend rate of seven per cent. The shares have been placed privately with a number of institutional investors.

His bride-to-be, Geneva Webb, 47, says she is not particularly fond of Cowden's snakes.

Berlin Spoof Inspired

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

With its very first "house" show, tailored on the strictest of budgets and master-minded by its own artistic director, Don Shipley, The Belfry presents a compact, nostalgic, comic and tuneful show that should keep audiences happy for the course of its two-week run at the Gladstone Avenue cultural centre.

Puttin' On the Ritz, a light-hearted reminiscence and at times good-natured spoof of Irving Berlin, his era, his music and lyrics, despite some flaws holds more than a touch of inspiration and is marked throughout with professional expertise.

Special plaudits must go to Ken MacDonald for an accomplished set highlighting mood and period with its black-and-white art deco theme and its excellent use of the space. It is complimented by a versatile wardrobe of black-and-white costumes (by Mary McMinn) and Giles Hogya's effective lighting.

The concept by directors Don Shipley and Pat Armstrong is tasteful and economical. The show is never allowed by wallow in sentiment despite such temptations as All Alone, and I've Got My Love to Keep Me Warm. The four bright, attractive performers — Mary Swinton, Sheila McCarthy, Bill Hosie and Dan Costain — are sustained within a framework that suits them to perfection.

Thhe songs are grouped according to subject and there is plenty of invention in their presentation — in the army group for instance, which includes This is the Army Mr. Jones, and God Bless America, and with Old Fashioned Wedding and Lookin' at You.

Clever arrangements by musical director Joan Beckow blend and intertwine the songs and keep the hour-and-a-half show flowing smoothly and buoyantly. Ms. Beckow was also the opening night pianist and with the saxophone and clarinet of Eric Knight provided a first rate accompaniment. Christopher Donison takes over the piano part in subsequent performances.

Opening night Friday was just slightly marred by one or two fluffs in the performance, once in a while a very minor accident or unscheduled backstage sound effect, a missed piece of timing that one noticed because so often the timing was dead on.

These are nit-picking criticisms however. My most serious criticism is that the opening is not good enough for the quality of this show.

Its no more than three or four minutes and clearly is an effort on the part of the directors to avoid a cliched type of opening, but it doesn't work.

Introducing the cast by projections of their images and names on the back wall is slow, awkward and gimmicky, and the threads of individual voices are too loose and thin to provide a sense of attack.

I think this highly talented group of directors and cast can do better for they've given us a delightful show otherwise which everyone should see before it ends March 5.

SHEER JOY of Puttin' On The Ritz, which opened Friday at Belfry, is led by Mary Swinton, Dan Costain, Sheila McCarthy and Bill Hoisie.

Sadlowski Appeals

WASHINGTON — Ed Sadlowski, the young insurgent who lost to organization candidate Lloyd McBride, announced Friday he has formally challenged the legality of the Feb. 8 election for United Steelworkers president. Sadlowski's decision, announced just hours before the deadline, portended a lengthy legal battle for the position that will be vacated next June by retiring president I. W. Abel. An unofficial tally showed that McBride, 60, who enjoyed Abel's support, defeated Sadlowski by an 84,000 vote margin out of a total 560,000 ballots cast.

EDMONTON — Author W. O. Mitchell of Calgary has declared his wholehearted support and willingness to speak on public platforms for the Unified Canada Movement (UCM), the organization's president, Grant Kennedy, said Friday. The Edmonton-based, anti-separatist group was formed here Wednesday.

OTTAWA — A Montreal economist and journalist, Monica Townson, Friday was named vice-chairperson of the advisory council on the Status of Women. Former economics editor of the Financial Times of Canada, Ms. Townson has worked for the past 1½ years as an economist and writer with the Royal Bank of Canada in Montreal.

CHICOPEE, Mass. — Daniel Benedict might think twice the next time he tries to be a Good Samaritan. Fire department medics said Thursday they found Benedict, 23, hanging upside down from a chain link fence along the Massachusetts Turnpike earlier this week. He was attempting to climb the fence to aid a stranded motorist with car trouble when he lost his balance and his leg got caught in the fence. While Benedict was hanging upside down, the stranded motorist started his car and drove off.

WINNIPEG — Two Minnesota men who completed a 500-mile trek by dog sled from St. Paul to Winnipeg were made honorary citizens of Winnipeg. Randy Herman and Denis Laboda made the nine-day trek as a good will gesture, uniting the St. Paul Winter Carnival with the St. Bonifice Festival du Voyageur. The pair used a total of 11 dogs on the trip.

LOS ANGELES — A charge of resisting arrest was dropped against Sigmund Jackson, 25, of The Jacksons singing group, formerly the Jackson Five. Jackson was stopped by a highway patrol officer last month for speeding. He allegedly "became combative," tried to escape, and was overpowered and handcuffed. The city attorney's office said Friday there is insufficient evidence to prosecute Jackson.

Andy Devine, Dead at 71

ORANGE, Calif. — Actor Andy Devine, best known as the rotund, squeaky-voiced deputy of television's Wild Bill Hickock series, died Friday, a family spokesman said.

Devine, 71, had suffered from leukemia and periodically required hospital treatment.

His acting career spanned from the golden days of silent movies to his appearance last year in Won Ton Ton, the Dog That Saved Hollywood.

During the 1930s Devine appeared in dozens of movies and because of his real western background he emerged as the fat friend of better known celluloid cowpokes of the period.

As his film career grew, so did Devine. He first appeared as a slim collegian and later weighed in at 346. In his 50s Devine dropped to about 250 pounds on doctor's orders.

His greatest public exposure came in the role of Jingles, deputy to Guy Madison in the Wild Bill Hickock television series.

They made 118 episodes of the series during the 1950s and it continued to air in the 1960s.

HOT AIR RECORD

FERNANDINA BEACH, Fla. — Karl Thomas achieved his goal of setting a record for travel across the United States by hot-air balloon Friday. He reached the Atlantic Ocean 18 days after leaving Arcadia, Calif.

Thomas, 28, of Troy, Mich., touched down on the beach near this city north of Jacksonville, said a spokesman for the company that sponsored the flight.

His flight surpassed publisher Malcolm Forbes' 33-day cross-country balloon trip by 15 days. Forbes made his trip in 1973.

3 Skip Rhodesia In Stolen Plane

SALISBURY — Three unidentified American recruits in white-ruled Rhodesia's army stole a small plane and flew it to a neighboring black African country, informed Rhodesian defence sources said Friday.

A police spokesman said that a Piper Cherokee light plane had been stolen from the Charles Prince airport but he gave no details.

Vikings at Best to Build Point Edge

By JIM CREIAR
Times Staff

UVic Vikings have a 13-point cushion and may be 40 minutes away from a playoff berth in the Canada West University Athletic Association men's basketball conference, but they're not packing their bags for Edmonton quite yet.

Vikings put it all together before a boisterous McKinnon Gym crowd of over 1,600 Friday night to down UBC Thunderbirds 74-60 in what amounts to the first of a two-game, total-points series for the right to advance against the first-place Alberta Golden Bears in a best-of-three final for the league title in Edmonton next weekend.

The issue will be decided tonight when UVic and UBC clash again at McKinnon at 8:30.

If Vikings win they'll finish alone in second, four points ahead of the T-Birds. But if UBC wins, the teams will be tied in the standings and also deadlocked in their four-game season series against each other with two victories each.

In that case, it will come down to points for and against in the four games between the Vikings and Thunderbirds.

UBC arrived in town Friday with a one-point margin in scoring but the Vikings, with the sharpest outside shooting they've shown at home and probably their best defensive game all year, now hold the upper hand by 13.

That means they can lose tonight by 12 and still make the playoff, although that's hardly the way coach Ken Shields wants it.

"We're not worrying about scores, we're out to win,' he said after Friday's game. "That lead is nothing. We're playing (tonight) as if it were a tied ball game. That's all."

UVic Vikettes, already in a position to start packing for the Canadian women's college finals in Calgary in two weeks, won their 39th straight CWUAA contest, 76-47, over the last-place UBC Thunderettes.

Vikettes clinched their title two weeks ago — there's no playoff in the women's league — and complete their regular schedule tonight against UBC at 6:30 at McKinnon. A victory will leave coach Mike Gallos' UVic girls with a 20-0 won-lost record for the second year in a row.

Vikings shot an excellent 60 per cent from the floor, almost all of it from outside, and overwhelmed the T-Birds with a well-balanced attack. They also held a big edge in rebounding, particularly under their own boards. Vikings out-rebounded the taller Thunderbirds 36-23 and hauled down 26 of 35 rebounds under their own basket.

Chris Hebb led the way with 10 rebounds (seven defensively). Lee Edmondson grabbed nine (six defensively) and Jim Duddridge eight (six defensively).

Duddridge, a fifth-year student who will play his last home game as a Viking tonight, was superb on offence. He counted 24 points and shot 70 per cent from the floor. He was deadly accurate from the corners.

Edmondson added 15 points with a 55 per cent field goal mark and a five-for-six effort at the foul line. Hebb had the best shooting percentage of all, 77 per cent for 14 points. Robbie Parris was 50 per cent from both the field and foul line for 11 points.

Jan Bohn led the losers with 18 points, Mike McKay had 11 and Oak Bay High grad Chris Trumpy 10. T-Birds shot 46 per cent in field goals.

"That was one of the best total defensive efforts we've had all season," Shields said He agreed it was also one of his team's best all-round games. "It was a team effort. Everybody did his job."

UBC coach Peter Mullins wasn't surprised by Vikings' rebounding. "They always do a good job there," he said, but he was impressed by their shooting.

Shields' point about playing for another win tonight is well made considering what happened during a brief Viking relapse in the second half Friday. UVic turned ball over three times and the T-Birds converted them all into baskets. In just over seven minutes, the visitors sliced a 22-point UVic lead in half.

Shelley Godfrey led the Vikettes with 18 points and sister Leslie had 11 as Gallo substituted freely throughout the game.

Gallo plans two weeks of intensive drills after tonight's schedule windup.

"By what I saw tonight," he said Friday, "we've still got some kinks to iron out. We pick up some cheap fouls by reaching, something we've been guilty of all season. And again, we've got to move the ball more crisply. We've also been sporadic on defence. We'll play a tough defence for five minutes, then let up for three. We can't get away with that in Calgary."

Vikettes' first game in Calgary is Friday, March 3 at 9 p.m. against the Great Plains conference winner; either Winnipeg or Regina. A victory would move UVic into the semi-finals March 4 at 9 p.m. against Quebec champion Concordia or the Atlantic conference representative. The final is Sunday, March 5.

VIKINGS (74): Tom Watson, Grant Boland 6, Mickey Welder, Robbie Parris 9, Ted Anderson 2, Jim Duddridge 24, Chris Hebb 14, Dale McLoughlin, Warren Wagstaff, Albert Olson, Ian Hyde-Lay, Lee Edmondson 17.

Ten Teams to Qualify In New Playoff Format

A four-game loosing streak isn't the kind of performance that lights a smile on the face of Victoria Cougar coach Pat Ginnell, but he has to be feeling better than the pilots of Western Canada Hockey League teams in Regina and Flin Flon.

The 12-team league has restructured its playoff system and, to all intents and purpose, Regina's Pats and Flin Flon Bombers are virtually doomed to miss the post-season action.

League president Ed Chynoweth said Friday the governors, at a meeting in Calgary this week, have decided to declare 10 teams in the playoffs. They will be determined on the overall point standings at the end of regular-season play.

Original plans called for the top three teams in each division to qualify for a round-robin tournament, followed by a best-of-seven series.

"Our original plans are impossible because of the amount to time required to complete them," Chynoweth explained Friday. "We just wouldn't have been able to have a winner in time for the Memorial Cup, which opens May 8 in Vancouver."

Points are still important, he added, because teams with higher total will earn the important home-ice advantage thoughout the playoffs.

As it happens, Brandon Wheat Kings appear headed for finish first, and New Westminster Bruins have a big edge on second place. After that, however, it becomes a race with only three points separating seven teams — Victoria, Kamloops, Portland, Medicine Hat, Winnipeg, Lethbridge and Saskatoon.

Lethbridge crowded into the pack Friday by scoring it's second straight victory over Victoria, 7-1. It was the fourth straight loss for Cougars, who return to Memorial Arena tonight to play Saskatoon.

In other games Friday, Winnipeg tied Flin Flon and Regina drew with Brandon, both 5-5; Portland edged Medicine Hat 6-5, and New Westminster tripped Saskatoon 5-2.

In Lethbridge, Rocky Saganiuk scored his 48th and 49th goals and tacked on two assists to spark the Broncos. Grant Eakin, Doug Morrison, Rod Guimont, Mario Botlik and Dean Solheim scored the others for Lethbridge, who outshot the travel-weary Cougars 52-27.

Curt Fraser scored Victoria's only goal on a power play early in the first period.

Rookie Steve Amiss started in only his 10th game for Victoria, but couldn't be faulted. He made 45 saves but suffered from shaky defensive support.

Baseball's Bingo Pays Off for Sport

One week's work:

It's fairly certain now that winter has passed into the great beyond, so can spring and baseball be far away? Not very. Because, on the one hand, Seattle Mariners of the American League, recently announced that seasons tickets now are on sale and the home opener will be in the Kingdome against the Angels on Wednesday, April 6. On another note, the fact that the annual Little League baseball dinner, under the auspices of president Don Wakelyn and emcee Leon Hall, was held this week, indicates it's already later than one would care to think.

And some worthy honors were distributed. Two sponsors, the International Woodworkers of America and the Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans, Branch 302, were signalled out for their continued support of Little League. It was also announced that two umpires will soon receive rewards. Norm Meunier and Morgan Salter will attend an umpires' clinic at San Bernadino, Calif., in March. Doug Hudlin, the Little League umpiring consultant who made the announcement, was looking tanned and fit following an Hawaiian holiday. And bingo players may be pleased to learn where all their money has gone, and how much. Secretary Tom Hawkins of the Greater Victoria Baseball Association, disclosed that the sum over the years now totals about $600,000 and all that money has been funnelled back into sport. Which is a job well done, and often not fully appreciated.

Speaking of money, watching the Mariners won't be that expensive. Tickets are priced at $5, $4.50 and $3 and for those who asked, the postal address is P.O. Box 4100, Seattle, Washington, 98104.

There haven't been many women umpires, if any, hereabouts, but the die has been cast elsewhere. Not only in baseball, but in cricket. Nelma Grout, 21, is Australia's only female first-grade umpire and, in a recent match she no-balled former Australian opening bowler Tony Dell, one of the biggest bowlers in the country, six times in one over — and Dell had no complaint.

"They were no-balls, all right," Dell said. "Nelma didn't miss a trick."

So watch it, gang. They're still moving in.

The Roy Vinthers' rink in the Macdonald Brier curling playdowns already has been dubbed "old folks" because three members are in their 40s. Vinthers is 45, and Leo Hebert and Barry Naimark are 44. But Vinthers isn't worried that he's with an over-the-hill gang. "The wait is always worth it, when you get there," he counters. "Because when you get to this age, time is running out." And speaking of curling, Neil Dickson is definitely returning here for the national police finals. A popular figure here in the past, Dickson is throwing third rocks for Roy Gislason of Winnipeg.

What they are saying: Montreal coach Scotty Bowman, on the problem of motivating the Canadiens who are runaway leaders in the Norris Division of the National Hockey League: "We sometimes have to hold closed meetings before a game to get ourselves interested." And add to embarrassing moments . . . for the newspaper man who asked Jimmy Connors, after he was beaten by Dick Stockton in the United States Indoor tennis championships, if losing was a humbling experience. Connors' answer was knife-edged: "I figure when I lose as many as I win, then it might be. Until then . . ."

Victoria Shamrocks will air their controversial draft problem again on Sunday at a Western Lacrosse Association meeting and it will be interesting to see if the league will unbend and allow Island players to be drafted by Island clubs as has been the case in the past. At any rate, the Irish are smack in the middle of another . . . er . . . discussion. The Larry Smeltzer case has surfaced. Smeltzer is the all-star goalkeeper from Fergus of the Ontario Lacrosse Association who played for Brampton in last year's Mann Cup final, was invited west by Coquitlam Adanacs some time ago, visited Victoria while he was here, and went home presumably to return as a member of the Coquitlam team. Now, it seems Victoria has more attractive possibilities and maybe Smeltzer would like to play here. He would.

It's no secret that Smeltzer talked to Shamrock officials. Coach Nirmal Dillon admitted that some time ago and this week firmed it up. "Yes, he's driving out and will report here." The Irish also have been in touch with Coquitlam and hope to reach an amiable settlement. Meanwhile, the Rocks have been working out and three of the graduating McDonalds have shown up. They are goalkeeper Al Radley, Gerry Cadwallader and Dave Lowden. Bob Cool is still playing soccer while Kevin Alexander is taking first-aid course on Tuesday practice nights. "Cool wants to play for us," said Dillon; while Kevin? "He's probably keeping his options open, and I can't blame him," Dillon added. But the big news is Glen Neuman. Out of the game last year, Neuman "will surprise a lot of people," said Dillon. "He's a fine player."

Demons Do It For Woodburn

Don Horwood suffered a bit of a fright but for Gary Woodburn, there was great delight.

It was a long time in coming, but Dunsmuir Demons provided coach Woodburn with the big treat in Friday's Greater Victoria High School Boys' Basketball League play.

Demons, thanks to the heroics of Rick Jeffrey, defeated Belmont 87-86 to score their first-ever decision over the Braves. It was also the first time in eight years that a Woodburn-coached team has beaten one coached by Bill Spotswood.

In other games Friday, Claremont Spartans downed Victoria Totems 79-62, Mt. Douglas Rams tripped Parkland Panthers 58-40 and Oak Bay overwhelmed Reynolds Roadrunners 98-48 despite the absence of guard Craig Higgins.

At Dunsmuir, Jeffrey was the most dashing Demon. He picked off 17 rebounds and scored 40 points, including the game-winner from the foul line wih only two seconds left in the game.

Greg Witt added 23 points for Dunsmuir while Steve Berry topped Belmont with 26.

Demons lost the services of Dave Baileys late in the game when he was ejected for committing a "flagrant personal foul." The ejection carries an automatic two-game suspension but Dunsmuir has only one game remaining before the Lower Island tournament next weekend.

Higgins provided Horwood with a fright when he turned his ankle in the opening minutes of the game at Reynolds. It's not serious, however, but Horwood kept his starry guard and leading scorer on the bench.

Ken Kirzinger, with 20, and Kelly Dukeshire, with 19, paced Oak Bay while John Horigan topped Reynolds with 10 points.

Ed Thornberg counted 16 points and Mike Wyatt 15 as Claremont decisioned Totems for the second time this season. Ian Bridge topped Vic High with 12 points.

At Mt. Doug, the Rams made it two-for-two in their series with Parkland as Art Plewes scored 14 points and Richard Avery added 12. Quinn Groenhyde, with 12, topped Panthers.

Angry Answer from Swig

RICHFIELD, Ohio (AP) — Cleveland Barons players served up an ultimatum Friday to majority owner Mel Swig and the embattled San Francisco businessman reacted bitterly.

The players, first threatening not to play in Friday night's National Hockey League game against Colorado Rockies at the Coliseum, finally gave Swig the ultimatum to pay their overdue salaries or commit himself to sell the team, or they will become free agents next Tuesday.

Bob Stewart, Cleveland player representative, said he explained to Swig, in a telephone call to the owner's San Francisco home, the situation player representative, said he explained to Swig, in a telephone call to the owners San phone call to the owner's San Francisco home, the situation and Swig's initial reaction was: "I don't give a damn."

Stewart met with his teammates and also talked by telephone with Alan Eagleson, NHL Players' Association director, and NHL president Clarence Campbell on Friday before the team reached its decision.

The burly defenceman said the endorsement by the players' association was the key factor in their decision to play Friday night — which resulted in a 3-3 tie with the Rockies — and Sunday night at Pittsburgh.

"If by noon Tuesday of next week this situation has not been rectified, unless we are paid in full or Mr. Greenberg steps in, every team in the league will back our team in our decision not to continue playing," Stewart said.

The Greenberg mentioned by Stewart is Washington businessman Sanford A. Greenberg, owner of the Richfield Coliseum, who has been involved during the last two weeks in on-again, off-again negotiations to buy all or part of the Barons.

In other NHL news Friday, the Vancouver Canucks completed a deal with St. Louis Blues to obtain centre Derek Sanderson, 30, despite Sanderson's reported $160,000 per-year salary.

Sanderson, a controversial player who is considered among the league's best at faceoffs and penalty-killing, will be in the Vancouver line-up tonight against Atlanta Flames.

Lifted Rock a Winner

COURTENAY — When does a rock count in curling when it's not a counter?

The answer, as provided by umpire Chuck Perry here Friday: When it is removed by one rink member before the opposition gets a chance to express an opinion.

The controversial situation came up in the opening round of the Vancouver Island mixed playoffs, and it cost Dave Smith's Juan de Fuca foursome a chance for victory.

The Smith rink, ahead 9-2 after five ends, never counted again as Mike McKay's Campbell River entry rallied for a 10-9 victory.

McKay counted three on the sixth, then stole four points in the next three ends to tie it, 9-9, heading home. An extra end seemed certain when Smith removed a Campbell River rock but also rolled out on the 10th end for an apparent blank.

But whoa! A McKay rock was in play near the outer rings. Most everyone agreed, including umpire Perry, that it didn't appear to be counting.

The McKay rink didn't get a chance to call for a measure or declare an opinion when a member of the Juan de Fuca rink, believing an extra end was going to be played, removed the McKay rock. The Campbell River rink filed an objection and Perry said he had no recourse but to declare it as a counter.

The controversy overshadowed a notable victory by Don Matheson's Racquet Club rink and the successes scored by Gord Carmichael of Victoria and Norm Thiessen of anaimo in the eight-rink, double-knockout competition.

Matheson edged former provincial champion Glen Harper of Duncan 7-5, Carmichael breezed past Howard Tyner of Qualicum Beach, 11-4, and Thiessen dropped Jim Fennell of Victoria 10-7.

Play resumed this morning and Vancouver Island's representatives in the Pacific Coast finals will be declared Sunday afternoon.

Tigers in Final

Victoria High Tigers, the defending champions and Reynolds Roadrunners have moved into the final of the Lower Island high school girls' basketball tournament.

Both made it with comfortable victories Friday.

Tigers shaded Parkland Panthers 45-32 while Reynolds topped Mt. Douglas Ramblers 51-36 in semi-final play at Esquimalt.

The tournament winds up this evening, starting at 5:30 p.m., at Spectrum.

Sandy Lewis set the pace for Vic High with a 22-point performance. Tracy McAra and Rhonda Kellar, each with 13, topped Reynolds.

Linda Rebitt, with 12, was Parkland's high scorer while Terry Crocker counted 12 for Mt. Doug.

Aero Picture Brighter

By The Canadian Press

Houston Aeros captain Ted Taylor had the news Houston hockey fans wanted to hear Friday, both on the ice and off.

Taylor scored a seconds period goal that helped the Aeros to a 4-2 win over San Diego Mariners, keeping the Mariners in second place behind the Aeros in the World Hockey Association's Western Division.

Then, at the end of the second period, Taylor took a rink-side microphone and told the Houston crowd that the Aeros players had reached an agreement with management concerning their unpaid salaries, allowing the Aeros to complete the regular season.

Players missed their payroll Tuesday for the first time in the team's five-year history.

In other WHA games Friday, Edmonton Oilers edged Winnipeg Jets 3-2, Calgary Cowboys beat Cincinnati Stingers 5-3 and Birmingham Bulls defeated New England Whalers 3-2.

SHIELDS CRACKS SKATING RECORD

WINNIPEG (CP) — Kam Kipping of Edmonton won both the 500 and 3,000 metre races in the senior men's division of the Canadian speed-skating championships that began Friday.

Kipping won the 500 in 41.7 seconds and the 3,000 in 4:53.2.

Finishing second in the 500 was Greg Planert of Kitchener, Ont., in 44.1 with Bill Thompson of Edmonton third in 45.8.

Dave Shields of Victoria, set a Canadian record in winning the junior men's 1500 metres. He finished in a time of 2:18.6. Gene Sim of Saskatoon was second in 2:19.9.

Cec Collects

SAN DIEGO (CP) — Bob Byman of Raleigh, N.C., fired a final-round six-under-par 64 Friday to win the $25,000 American Golf Tour tournament with a 54-hole score of 193.

His 17-under-par total on the 5756-yard Rancho Renasquitos course gave him a four-stroke victory over Gary Vanier of Oakland, Calif., and first-prize money of $5,000.

Vanier had the best round of the day, a 62, and collected $3,000 to remain the AGT tour's leading money winner with $9,710 after five tournaments.

Bob Lytle of San Jacinto, Calif., was third at 198 and won $2,000.

Cec Ferguson of Victoria, who shared the lead after Wednesday's opening round, finished in a tie wih two other golfers at 199 after a 67 Friday and took home $1,066.

The 26-year-old Ferguson, who is 22 under par for his last five rounds on the AGT circuit, now has banked almost $15,000 since turning professional last September.

His next tournament will be at El Centro in California next week.

Dale Trails

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Judy Rankin celebrated her 32nd birthday Friday by shooting a three-under-par 69 for the first-round lead in the Ladies Professional Golf Association's $50,000 Orange Blossom Classic.

Rankin, the tour's leading money winner last year with a record $150,734, had five birdies and two bogies on the par 62, 6109-yard Pasadena Golf Club course.

Joyce Kzmierski was one shot behind. At 71 were Patty Hayes and Jo Ann Washam. Vivian Brownley, Pat Meyers and Sally Little were tied at par 72.

Sandra Post, formerly of Oakville, Ont., and now living in Florida, was among 11 players at 73.

Dale Shaw of Victoria, playing in her second tournament as a professional, shot 38-39 and is in a group of 11 golfers at 77.

BOWLER OF WEEK

Sandwiching powerful 367 middle game between starting 331 effort and 224 third game, May Wallis collected women's fivepin laurels with 922 series during 17th week of 14th annual Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest. May earned weekly award and qualified for Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs with her score, rolled in Monday Major League at Town and Country Lanes.

Pate's 'Out' Is Most Painful

LOS ANGELES (AP) — For the first time in two weeks, Rik Massengale is out of the lead. Arnold Palmer and Gary Player are out of the tournament. And, for an undetermined period of time, Jerry Pate is out of golf.

"You could see he was in physical pain," said Roger Maltbie, who played with Pate, the current U.S. Open champion, in Friday's second round of the $200,000 Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open. "You could see him flinch when he hit a shot."

Pate, the 1976 rookie of the year and winner of the Phoenix Open that kicked off the 1977 season, withdrew after nine holes with severe wrist pains. One physician who examined him advised surgery.

"I'm staying away from that," said the 23-year-old Pate. But he did advise tour officials to withdraw his name from any event until they are advised differently. He left immediately for his home in Pensacola, Fla.

While Pate was struggling over the 7,029-yard Riviera Country Club course, Lanny Wadkins and Tom Purtzer moved into the lead at 135, seven under par, marking the first time in two weeks that Massengale had failed to lead the tour. Wadkins had a second-round 69 and Purtzer a wildly erratic, four-under-par 67 that included seven birdies and three bogeys.

"It's almost a relief not to be leading," said Massengale, a runaway winner of last week's Bob Hope Desert Classic and the first-round leader here. He had a 73 that included a three-putt bogey on his second hole.

Former national amateur champion Craig Stadler, with a 68, and Maltbie, with a 69, shared third place two strokes back of the co-leaders at 137. Bob Gilder, who matched par 71, was tied with Massengale at 138.

Some of the game's more glamorous figures had their difficulties in the weather that ranged from mild and sunny to cool and cloudy. Palmer, Player and Billy Casper, who have a combined total of more than 200 career international victories, all missed the cut for the last two rounds. Player had a 149 total, Casper 153, Palmer 154.

Tom Watson, a record-setting winner of two events earlier this year, also was a casualty at 149.

Defending champion Hale Irwin and PGA king Dave Stockton just made it at 147, the cutoff figure.

BACK PAY AWARD TO THREE WOMEN

Three women have been awarded $2,213 back pay in a decision handed down today by a human rights board of inquiry.

Complaint was laid under the Human Rights Code that the women, employed as police clerks by the district of Abbottsford, were paid less than men performing essentially the same duties.

In finding sex discrimination, the board ordered the municipality to cease and desist and to pay additional wages to the women for the period Jan. 15-Dec. 1, 1975.

Diane Davies will get $442; Hildegaarde Toews will receive $926 and Eileen Pickford $845.

Director of the human rights branch Kathleen Ruff said men employed by Abbortsford in similar work were classified as guards-dispatchers, but she said the inquiry found responsibilities were equal to those of the women.

Ruff said the Abbotsford case was an important issue as far as working women were concerned.

She said the number of women being paid less than men for doing the same work is increasing due to the increasing number of women entering the work force, adding that government bodies should be expected to set an example for the private sector.

Pen Victim, Informer Transferred

VANCOUVER (CP) — A member of the special Commons subcommittee investigating Canada's penitentiary system said Friday that a prisoner who testified about sexual attacks on a 22-year-old convict has been transferred to "a safe place."

Simma Holt (L—Vancouver Kingsway) said Fred Leister and the victim of the assaults have been transferred out of the British Columbia Penitentiary on the orders of prison staff.

Mrs. Holt said Leister gave his testimony without assurance of special protection. Leister told the subcommittee of a 23-year-old prisoner who has been repeatedly raped and abused by other prisoners.

Prison officials moved Leister and the prisoner he described to protective custody before his testimony to protect him from possible reprisals by other prisoners.

New Westminster police were investigating the allegations made by Leister.

Meanwhile, members of the special subcommittee next week begin hearings in Ottawa to determine how the chaotic federal prison system can be sorted out.

As the MPs ended an exhausting cross-country tour of 17 institutions, including 10 maximum-security prisons, Chairman Mark MacGuigan (L—Windsor-Walkerville) said at least two more months of hard work faces the committee.

Formed last October to look into the causes of riots and hostage-takings in the system, it was supposed to report to parliament Feb. 28.

Indians Declare Reserve Is Off-Limits

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Musqueam Indian Band has posted about 150 signs on land near the University of B.C. warning that the land is an Indian reserve and trespassers could be guilty of a summary conviction for trespass on a reserve.

Frances Guerin, chairman of the band's aboriginal land rights committee, said the sign swere posted Thursday to draw public attention to Indian land claims.

The signs were posted on both sides of Southwest Marine Drive near the reserve. At Jericho, Champlain Heights and on the endowment lands.

Mrs. Guerin said the band wants public support in efforts to arrange a meeting between federal Indian Affairs Minister Warren Allmand and provincial Labor Minister Allan Williams, who is responsible for Indian affairs in B.C.

She said the band does not plan to prosecute anyone for trespassing at this time.

When the reserve land was set aside, the Indian negotiators did not know how their own group would grow or how populated Vancouver would become, Mrs. Guerin said.

"What we need is an extension of our land base," she said.

The Musqueam band has a 416-acre reserve adjacent to the endowment lands and band chief Delbert Guerin, Mrs. Guerin's husband, has called for a moratorium on university endowment land development until the Indian land claim is heard by the provincial and federal government.

Mr. Guerin said the projected growth of the band from 420 persons to 2,000 by the year 2000 means the band will need more room for housing.

'Tied' Insurance Ruled Against Combines Act

BY MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

B.C., superintendent of insurance says an automobile insurance package offered by the Royal Insurance Co. is in contravention of federal law.

E. T. Cantell says Royal's policy of offering automobile insurance coverage only on condition that the consumer has or purchases a homeowner's or tenant's policy is prohibited by the Combines Investigation Act.

In a memorandum to all insurance agents in B.C., Cantell says, without mentioning Royal by name, that such a practice amounts to "tied selling."

He said the package is interesting from a marketing viewpoint but would only be approved if the insurer is prepared to offer the same automobile insurance to those who don't have homeowners or tenants' policies.

Royal is the only private insurance company which has taken advantage of the provincial government's decision to allow them to provide physical damage coverage in opposition to the government-owned Insurance Corp. of B.C.

The private companies can only write policies for collision, fire and theft. Public liability coverage is left to ICBC.

One source said Cantell's decision forced Royal to change its conditional policy Thursday night to allow for a separate automobile policy.

Fred King, branch manager for the B.C.-Yukon region, was less specific saying initially that the company intended all along to provide such policies.

However, later in an interview from Vancouver, he said perhaps Cantell's ruling "may have speeded things up a bit."

He said phase one of the company's return to the automobile insurance field was a policy tied to the homeowner's and tenant's policy and phase two was the introduction of a separate automobile policy.

He said Cantell's ruling does not affect the legal status of whatever contracts have been signed because they are not effective until the start of the insurance year, March 1.

King said he does not feel Cantell's ruling was directed at Royal particularly but was more of a "housekeeping" measure designed to lay the ground rules for the private insurers to return to the automobile field.

He said Royal has budgeted to write $5 million in automobile insurance this year. A "rather minimal" number of policies have been sold so far, he added.

King also said he knows of two or three other companies who are thinking of providing automobile coverage.

Only those who are 30 or over and who have had a drivers' licence for five years and no accidents during that period are eligible for Royal's coverage.

NDP leader Dave Barrett said Friday in an interview this is confirmation of NDP claims that private insurers would be back in B.C. only to take the cream of the insurance crop, the no-risk drivers.

He said he is pleased with Cantell's ruling.

Of Royal's automobile policy, Barrett said, "they've been caught again playing selfish, narrow-minded games."

He wondered why Education Minister Pat McGeer, responsible for ICBC, did not explain the ground rules to the insurance companies instead of leaving it up to Cantell.

King countered the charge that his company was just interested in the "cream" of the insurance market by saying it is only the first stage of Royal's plans.

He said by next year he expects the company to provide coverage for all categories of drivers.

He said the branch didn't decide until last month to get back into the business and so there wasn't time to hire staff and acquire office space which would allow for more complete coverage.

Judge Hits 'Playing Games'

NANAIMO (CP)—A 14-year-old boy who has caused frustration among the judiciary because of inadequate holding facilities for chronic juvenile trouble-makers, appeared before Judge Stan Wardill in family court Friday on further charges.

The boy came to public attention last year when Judge Wardill placed him in the personal care of Victor Belknap, superintendent of child welfare. Judge Wardill also fined Belknap $250 and ordered restitution after the boy pleaded guilty to a charge of breaking and entering.

Judge Wardill's order against Belknap was later quashed by the B.C. Court of Appeal.

The boys was arrested in Nanaimo Thursday night on a charge of possession of stolen property.

Judge Wardill said the charges, which were stayed Feb. 11, would be heard March 1, and the boy was to be held in custody until then in a Victoria juvenile detention home.

Judge Wardill said, "I'm not happy to return him to Victoria. The last six charges were stayed by the Crown," in a Victoria court.

He said, "somebody is playing games."

New Commissioner

Wilfred John Wallace, a Vancouver lawyer, was appointed to the British Columbia Legal Services Commission by the cabinet in an order released Friday.

American Remanded

SURREY (CP) — Rena Marie Conley, 21 of Hayward, Calif., was remanded today for trial in provincial court March 9 on a charge of kidnapping in connection with the abduction of a Surrey baby last Sept. 2.

Conley will be held in Oakalla unless she posts $18,000 bail.

Sandra Hanoum, 24, also of Hayward, was arrested and charged in connection with the same kidnapping but remains in custody in San Francisco where she is fighting extradition of Canada.

Victim Revealed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Gert Lemke, 42, of Vancouver was identified by police as the man killed in a single-car accident on the Oak Street Bridge Friday. Police said Lemke failed to negotiate an exit.

20-Year Term

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Terry Gordon Galinas, of Terrace, was sentenced Friday in Prince George County Court to 20 years in prison on a charge of attempted murder. Galinas had pleaded guilty to the charge after Diana Mary Taylor was stabbed near Terrace Aug. 26, 1976.

Marketers Named

British Columbia Marketing Board Chairman George Okulitch, vice-chairman Russell Freeze, and board members Margaret McDonald and Martin Hunter were reappointed Friday for a one-year term. Alfred E. Pepin was appointed to a first one-year term.

LeBlanc Takes Look

VANCOUVER (CP) — Federal Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc toured the waterfront Friday for a first-hand look at facilities described by fish processors as overcrowded and inadequate. He also met processors for two hours and was told more room for facilities will be needed because Canada has expanded its offshore fishing boundary to 200 miles from 12.

Fish Union Eyes Growth

VANCOUVER (CP) — The new president of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union said Thursday his first priority is to organize more fishermen.

Jack Nichol, previously union secretary-treasurer, said the UFAWU represents only about 6,500 of the 10,000 fishermen in British Columbia and an organizational drive is needed, particularly among net fishermen.

He said the union will continue to talk with the Native Brotherhood of B.C. in an effort to bring all fishermen under the UFAWMU.

Nichol replaces president Homer Stevens earned a reputation as one of B.C.'s toughest union leaders during four decades in the fishing industry.

Nichol, 50, started in the industry in 1949 as a shoreworker in a Vancouver plant. He became a full-time union organizer in 1963, was elected business agent in 1964 and secretary-treasurer in 1970.

His election marks the first time that a shoreworker has become president of the union.

He said the union faces tough bargaining this summer as the contracts for the tender and shoreworkers and salmon fishery come up.

Lagoon's Future Discussed

Is the future of Esquimalt Lagoon doomed by development?

The lagoon and other endangered habitats like the natural areas and farmlands of the Saanich Peninsula, will be discussed by environmental experts at public meetings Friday, Feb. 25 and Friday, March 4.

The meetings, sponsored by the Greater Victoria Environmental Centre, will be held at the University of Victoria in the Elliot Building, starting at 7:30 p.m.

Suzuki Fears Upsurge in Cancer

OTTAWA (CP) — Scientists want to do possibly high risk recombinant DNA research, genesplicing to create new life forms, because "the guy that does a lot of this stuff is almost sure to end up with a Nobel prize," said Vancouver geneticist David Suzuki.

"There are at least six Nobel prizes riding on this work without question," Dr. Suzuki said on a program broadcast Thursday night on the CBC-FM network.

"I would say the chances are overwhelming that we are in for very large outbreaks of disease . . . and I would predict definitely that there would be large increases in the incidence of cancer."

In recombinant DNA research scientists chemically snip bits of hereditary information from different organisms — plants, animals, humans and bacteria — and recombine them in bacteria to create new life forms.

Supporters of this research say it can be used to create such things as bacterial factories to manufacture scarce human hormones such as insulin.

Its opponents warn researchers could unwittingly create a sort of super disease totally resistant to antibiotic drugs. They are skeptical that the new life forms created in this research can be imprisoned in laboratories.

So far both the risks and benefits of this research are theoretical. Scientists around the world have voluntarily halted such research until standards are set.

U.S. standards were set last July, and proposed standards to cover Canadian recombinant DNA research were released Feb. 1 by the Medical Research Council.

The standards set six levels of physical containment based on the perceived risk of the work — in effect physical barriers in the laboratories that would reduce the chance a dangerous organism could escape.

As a sort of fail safe measure they also set three levels of biological containment, disabling the organisms to reduce their chances of survival outside the laboratory.

The final standards will be set by the Council at a meeting Feb. 22-23, and projects involving recombinant DNA may begin at one of the country's medical schools as soon as April 1.

The host bacteria used in the experiments, E. coli, "inhabits the guts of every human being on the planet," Dr. Suzuki said, warning that if an E. coli containing recombinant DNA escapes from a laboratory they will transmit their genetic information very quickly to any other organism they come in contact with.

"It is possible than in 15 years there will be a sudden outbreak of cancer of the rectum or cancer of the gut," Dr. Suzuki said.

RESEARCH 'LEAPFROG' RACE ON

OTTAWA (CP) — Scientists have begun the first lap of what may become a life and death race with bacteria, as more and more of the disease-causing "bugs" outwit antibiotic drugs.

A strain of gonorrhea, the most common human bacterial infection, has recently acquired total resistance to penicillin, one of the major weapons in medicines' antibiotic arsenal.

Cases of the new gonorrhea, resistant even to the new drug of last resort — spectinomycin — have been reported in Britain, says Dr. Alex Morrison, head of the federal health protection branch.

He said experts in the field fear it is just a matter of time before penicillin-resistant gonorrhea reaches epidemic proportions in this country, although only once case has been reported so far.

As this gonorrhea bacteria becomes more prevalent, the odds increase it will pass its imperviousness to penicillin on to structurally similar disease-causing bacteria, a prime candidate being the bacteria which causes meningitis in adults, Dr. Morrison said.

Dr. Morrison said as bacteria acquire resistance to one antibiotic drug scientists race to create another drug. He did not know if a time could come when researchers lose their perilous game of leapfrog.

He added that many of these newer, more exotic antibitics have far more unwanted side effects than penicillin which "is emminently safe for all but the few people who are allergic to it."

An editorial in the Feb. 5 issue of the Canadian Medical Association Journal says doctors helped create the problem of antibiotic resistant bacteria through overuse and misuse of the "wonder drugs," partly out of ignorance and partly because of pressure from patients who feel they shouldn't leave a doctor's office without a prescription.

Dr. Morrison said there is an immense controversy in both the United States and Canada over whether the low doses of antibiotics given to chickens and hogs since the early 1950s to stimulate growth have turned these food sources into prime breeding grounds for antibiotic-resistant bacteria.

Dice, divorce and skis in Reno

Travel Tips

By STAN DELAPLANE

When snow comes to the high Sierra, the Nevada gaming halls prosper.

"Skiers are not high rollers," said a pit boss in Harrah's on the south shore of Lake Tahoe. "But we get a spillover from the ski resorts. They come over to see the shows. And not many people can walk through here without pulling a slot machine handle — once.

Reno — "The Biggest Little City In The World" — is only 30 miles away from the chair lifts. I drove over through Carson City in the crisp, iced fog the Indians called pogonip.

The State of Nevada became famous for divorce when America's Sweetheart, Mary Pickford, went to Minden to work out the Great Tragedy. All over the U.S. people wept.

It was a gold rush business for Reno. Every woman with any class had to get her six weeks' divorce in The Biggest Little City.

Cattle ranches dressed up the cowboys and became dude ranches. Madame did her six weeks on bracing horseback.

The business has fallen off somewhat. Divorce has become old hat. Hardly worth a line in the back pages.

Divorce judges only make a salary. Marrying judges do better. A good marrying judge can rack up about $40,000 a year in fees.

It was a bright day in Reno. I went down to the Virginia Street bridge where divorcees came from the courthouse to cast in the wedding ring. So they say.

Never saw it myself. The chick would come out of the courtroom freshly split. Walk out on the bridge. Ease the ring off her finger — splash.

"Not likely," a gambler told me. "A dame is not that dumb, no matter how mad."

Probably so — though it ruins a good story.

There's a sign in a pawn shop downtown: "We buy wedding rings."

Though Reno's had plenty of ink as the divorce capital, marriages top them. There are seven times more splices than splits.

Very good odds as any gambler will tell you.

At the banks of slot machines the ladies pull, whirr, clunk. Pull, whirr, clunk. It's a habit.

"You won't believe this," said a Reno gambler, "but it's the truth, so help me. Some big prof in an Eastern college — a psycholigist type — wanted to find out why dames sit and play and play like that.

"So what he did was get a bunch of chimpanzees. He set them up with a bank of slots.

"They rigged the machine so it apid off in bananas. Clunk, — the chimp hits the jackpot. Out fall the bananas. They had it loosened up so it paid on every play."

He said: "Well, the chimps were pulling good. Some of them were even looking into playing two machines at once. Just like women do here.

"So they tightened up the payoff. A banana every 10 plays.

"The chimps went right on playing.

"Then the psycho man fixed the machines so they paid off plastic bananas. No difference to the chimp

"Then he fixed it so it only paid in poker chips. What does a chimp know about poker chips?

"I give you my word. It made no difference to the chimps. They went right on playing. They were hooked."

The dice roll on the green felt tables. At some expense to you and me. But also to the house.

Dice cost $1.25 a pair last time I looked into it. That was 10 years ago. I imagine they've gone up. Just like hamburger.

"We give away a lot of dice," said a house man. "Maybe a man did well and wants the pair for a souvenir. Maybe he did bad. He wants to go home and try them."

Watery paradise for poi

Farmer stoops to feed Hawaii

By JOHN GETZE

HANALEI, Hawaii — With its waterfalls, streams and fern-covered mountainsides, Kauai is known as the Garden Isle of the Hawaiian chain. And while these special conditions attract thousands of tourists each year, they are also the functional secret of Davis Kaona's modest success.

Kaona, 69, is one of several dozen small taro farmers in the beautiful Hanalei Valley on Kauai's northern shore. Crushed to make poi, the bulbous root of the taro plant is grown commercially only here and on the big island of Hawaii.

The reason is the water. Like rice, taro must be grown with its roots submerged and its stalks in the warm sunshine. But the water cannot be allowed to stagnate — it must gently be replenished by a continual flow. Only on Kauai and Hawaii is this steady supply available.

"Water from the mountains is everything," says Kaona, pointing up to a 2,000-foot waterfall that divides the green peaks behind his fields. "The water must always be running, or else the taro becomes rotten."

Hanalei's favorable conditions were not discovered by modern science; far from it. Kaona was born on this farm while his father worked the same muddy taro patches. Kaona's grandfather worked them before the turn of the century.

"In those days, my grandfather did not sell the taro as I do," says Kaona. "His family ate it as their main source of food. And it was a good life, too. They made enough poi to last them a few days, then moved down to the beach and went fishing. When the poi ran out, they would come back up to the fields and make more."

Kaona's four acres of taro require constant attention. In all, Kaona has 16 different patches, each in a different stage of growth. One patch is always ready to be harvested and one is always ready for planting.

But he still finds time to fish, sometimes in the evening or sometimes in the middle of the day. There is no one to tell him what to do, so he often works a few hours in the morning and again in the late afternoon.

It is not as leisurely an existence as one might expect, however, for almost all of Kaona's workday is spent knee-deep in mud and water, bent at the waist.

"Hawaiians get used to the backache," says Kaona with a smile. "Haoles never do." Haole (pronounced how-lee) is the Hawaiian term for caucasian.

Kaona also has a small garden to help supplement his family's diet. In a small patch by his workshed, he grows bananas, sugar cane, papayas, lettuce and string beans.

Kaona's only source of income, however, comes from the taro. A large poi manufacturing company in Honolulu (there are only two in the islands) regularly sends its empty sacks for Kaona to fill. The poi company pays all transportation costs.

For the last several years, Kaona has been receiving $8.80 per 80-pound sack. He says he averages about 100 bags per patch. Because a patch takes anywhere from 14 to 16 months to reach maturity (You can tell because the leaves start turning yellow," he says), Kaona grosses less than $14,000 a year.

"I'm not rich, but I'm happy," he says.

Despite his advancing years, Kaona does almost all of the work himself. Recently, however, his daughter and son-in-law have been helping.

"All the children born here used to go away to find better jobs," says Kaona. "In the last few years, though, more young people are staying. Some are even coming back. Maybe they see what a nice life we really have here."

And although Kaona says he soon plans to turn over much of his taro land to his daughter and son-in-law, the weathered Hawaiian has no plans for ultimate retirement. "I've worked in the taro all my like, why quit? I'll probably keep doing it until I can't get out of bed."

Chances are good that Kaona's land will go on producing taro for poi long after his death. The demand — chiefly from Hawaiian tourists — has outstripped supply for several years.

Cruise the Atlantic to BRITAIN via Wardair

Low cost – that's the ticket:
when you take a trip on an Advance Booking Charter flight, you're travelling on the most economical fare plan there is. And when you fly with Intervac via Wardair, Canada's Holiday Airline, you're doing even better ... and here's how

Meet the crew:
on board your Wardair aircraft, a full complement of flight attendants is at your service – more than on any other North American airline. They'll bring you imported wine with your meal, for example, and bar service, including your choice of after-dinner liqueurs – all at no extra cost. (You'd pay for drinks and wine on Air Canada "Charter Class" fares.)

We go non-stop:
all Wardair flights to Britain are non-stop ... every Thursday and Sunday to London, on Thursdays to Manchester, and every Wednesday to Prestwick. Coming back is just as easy. On London flights, you can choose to stay away 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 8 or even 10 weeks. (With "Charter Class" fares on Air Canada, you can only stay away a maximum of 45 days – with us, up to 70 days.) On Manchester flights, you can stay away 3, 4 or 5 weeks, and on Prestwick flights, for 2, 3, 4 or 6 weeks. It's all the same to us, all the same low price to you.

Galley at your service:
when you fly Wardair, you enjoy delicious hot meals on board. The menu usually reads: fresh garden salad, filet mignon with vegetables, dessert, tea or coffee – all served on china.

Cabin comforts:
your flight attendants will do all they can to make your flight as comfortable as possible. If you feel like 40 winks, your seat tilts back, and blanket and pillow are yours for the asking.

On our 747s, a flight attendant will bring your personal audio headset (at no extra charge on Wardair – you'd have to pay extra on Air Canada), so you can listen to your favourite kind of music whenever you feel like it, without disturbing a soul.

Baggage below:
when you fly Wardair to Britain, you enjoy the benefit of our generous 66 lbs. free baggage allowance. (You are only allowed 44 lbs. on Air Canada's "Charter Class" fares.) All the more for you to bring home great buys from the U.K. when you fly Wardair.

We're with you when you land too:
cruising you across the Atlantic is one thing, but Intervac can go a lot further to help you enjoy a great holiday. If you want us to help in any way – from reserving a Rent-A-Car, booking you into a hotel in Britain or Europe for a few nights to arranging a complete trip that includes, say, a Mediterranean cruise or a motor coach tour of Britain or Europe – all you have to do is ask. Intervac makes it all so easy. See below for more details.

Now check the schedule. There's a flight just right for you.

Meet Boris, Nepal's biggest promoter

By SHARON ROSENHAUSE

KATMANDU, Nepal — "If you have imagination, then you can do anything," says Boris Lisanevitch, the man who opened this picturesque mountain kingdom to tourism.

And he has. Born in 1905 to a wealthy White Russian family in Odessa, luck and pluck brought Lisarevitch — "it's like son of a bitch with a V" — to Nepal in 1951 as a guest of the then-king.

Everyone calls him Boris. His name is as well-known in this capital as HMG, the shorthand for His Majesty's Government. Early this year he opened Nepal's newest hotel, partly financed by the World Bank.

His Russian accent as pronounced as his taste for vodka and his eye for women, Boris, 71, looks and acts like a man of 50.

"I have so many friends who worked hard, made a lot of money, then they retired, and they were gone in a year or two," he says. "What is necessary for a man is work. Change occupations, have the new ideas. You get stale all the time in one type of work."

He has moved from one career to another — from ballet dancer to club impresario to big-game hunter to tourism patron — out of necessity and by chance, always driven by a free spirit and extraordinary self-confidence.

Daily, Boris holds court in the Yak and Yeti, the restaurant he opened here in 1970. The restaurant and Boris are institutions.

"One thing which is tirng is every day people come with an introduction. You have to be nice, talk to them, buy them a drink," he protests.

"What is necessary for a man is work. Change occupations, have the new ideas. You get stale all the time in one type of work."

But Boris clearly enjoys his celebrity status.

He parks himself at a table, raises his bushy black eyebrows in horror at his luncheon partner's Coca-Cola. "That's all? Oh, God." Boris complains, then orders the first of two "wodka" and tonics — followed, after lunch, by two cognacs.

Construction on the new hotel — "California earthquake proof," he assures — is going on outside. Inside, flies hover around the table. Boris apologizes for the noise and shouts commands to his waiters to apply their fly swatters. When they do, he downs his first "wodka" and tells his story.

After the October, 1917 Revolution, a family friend arranged for Boris to join Odessa's ballet company. That gave him papers to move about freely, which his then cadet status ruled out. An added factor, he says, was that the school had "a lot of nice girls."

Five years later, in 1924, he left Russia to join a French ballet company in Paris. Once in Europe, he danced, worked for a time on the Renault assembly line, joined Diaghilev's company and toured Europe, then joined another ballet corps and toured Europe and South Africa. Was he a good dancer? "Fair."

On a European holiday, he "found a beautiful little thing" who became his first wife. They played the European cabaret-music hall circuit. In 1933, they signed a six-month contract with Bombay's Taj Mahal Hotel.

"India at that time was sort of like going to Mars," he recalls. "So we decided to see this country of mystery." Then they decided to see the rest of the East.

Their travels took them to Shanghai, Vietnam, Cambodia, back to India. In Saigon, Boris met a Frenchman who "was building the road called the Ho Chi Minh Trail." He heard that I'm mad on shooting. He said, 'Come and shoot meat for the camp.' I spent three months shooting."

Boris says he has shot 68 tigers too many. In all, he's shot 69. "When you're young, you're bloodthirsty, and it's excitement," he says almost apologetically.

On the way back to Europe, he stopped in Calcutta. He had four years of British residency and decided to get the fifth and a passport by staying in the then British colony. "I say, 'My God, you call yourself the second city of the empire and you don't have any place to go after 11 p.m.'"

He opened the 300 Club, after London's 400 Club. It was Calcutta's first club to admit foreigners, Indians and women at the same time. Boris imported a chef from France, an orchestra from Shanghai. What did he know then about running a club? "Nothing."

Glasgow: Grimy diamond of Europe

By BETTY WALKER

GLASGOW — A diamond in the rough. This 800-year-old city is big, industrial, grimy and dirty. But it has a brilliant sparkle.

In the River Clyde Valley, it is surrounded by mountains and glens, lochs and rivers. A beautiful setting for Scotland's largest city and seaport.

Glasgow's centre, George Square, is dominated by the opulent city chambers. Opened in 1888, the building has imposing loggia and banquet hall. Statues around this oasis include Queen Victoria; James Watt, the steam engine inventor; and poets Sir Walter Scott and Robert Burns.

On the northeast corner is Strathclyde University, where John Logie Baird, television pioneer, studied.

Just off the square is the main shopping district. Sauchiehall and Buchanan streets are pedestrian malls attractively landscaped with trees, shrubs and flowers in brightly colored pots. There are specialty shops, boutiques, large department stores, and the Argyle Arcade's small jewelry shops.

I took time from shopping to sit on one of the many wooden benches to watch and listen to a strolling busker.

Suddenly I was caught in the rain. I dashed for shelter under "The Highland Man's Umbrella" on Argyle Street. It actually is the railway bridge into Central Station and the Central Hotel with its luxurious restaurant — Malmaison.

Not far away and less elegant is the Ceylon Tea Room. Up one flight of stairs, the busy cafeteria has a lavish variety of tempting salads. The girls behind the counter willingly describe each salad. I chose shrimp, potato (with cheese and mushrooms), mixed green, cabbage and fruit salads. Tea, rolls and dessert were served at the table.

Under another railway bridge is Stockwell Street China Bazaar. The outside shabbiness didn't discourage a visit. Inside, it was splendid: pottery, crystal and china at reasonable prices. Postal rates are costly, but my Royal Albert tea set was worth the expense.

All around, buildings are being cleaned, streets are becoming motorways and multistorey buildings are replacing tenements.

In suburban communities, such as Cardonald, many residential streets are one-way. There are bungalows, semidetached houses and two-storey apartments with lovely gardens. The David Neale home on Moulin Road has 100 rose bushes (I counted) in the front yard. Out back are more roses, dahlias, apple trees, a vegetable garden and a greenhouse with red and yellow tomatoes. The business district has a supermarket — Safeway. But many people still prefer to queue at the small bakeries, greengrocers and butcher shops.

The city has theatres, cinemas, an internationally known orchestra, opera and ballet companies. And five soccer teams.

Glasgow's name, derived from a Celtic word, Cleschu, means "dear green spot." This commercial city has 62 dear green spots.

The oldest park in Glasgow is Green. Kelvingrove Park has a one-mile nature trail along the River Kelvin. Botanic gardens contain a unique collection of tree ferns and plants. Victoria Park's world-famous Fossil Grove has tree stumps and roots that grew 230 million years ago. A multipurpose indoor sports centre is in Bellahouston Park. And from a point in Cathkin Braes Park you can see to Edinburgh — on a clear day.

Vienna pastry shops sweet-tooth heven

VIENNA — When you look at a menu does your eye travel down through the shrimp cocktail and beef bourguignonne right to the pies, puddings, and ice creams?

Do you always remember to "leave room for dessert."

Do you often wish you could have two desserts for the price of one?

If your answer is yes all the way, the place for you to enjoy is Vienna. Here people with a passion for pastry are never apologetic about it. They just dive right in and order up a piece of the famous chocolate-rich Sachertorte with extra whipped cream on the side, or a slice of apple or poppy-seed strudel, or one of those puffy, cream-filled, chocolate-covered Indianers, or whatever their choice may be.

Anyone looking for a light, unpretentious dessert will not find it in Vienna. Our guides on an Austrian food tour of seven writers were clever in initiating us.

They took us first to the best, most famous, the world-champion pastry shop, Demel's. We were soon "hooked" on Viennese pastries for the duration of the visit, if not forever.

To get the finest ingredients for their famous pastry, Demel's chefs will send all over the world for whatever they need.

Each of the pastry chefs is a specialist — some in puff pastry, some in tarts, others make only cake mixtures. No electric beaters are used. Everything must be beaten by hand to have the right consistency and warmth.

Away from the kitchens, the front of the house is out of the baroque world of the Old Empire, sparkling with mirrors and silver, black marble tables, and chandeliers. It is judged, of course, not for its decor, but for its unrivalled pastries, and luscious oandies wrapped in fanciful papers.

Of the best-known specialities of the house, the strudel and the Indianer rate high, but at least a dozen different tortes are made every day.

On an average, say, you will find the Indianer torte, Josephinen torte, Pralinen torte, Giselatorte, chocolate cream torte, the various Linzertorte, the Nusswaffeltorte (an exception because it is square), the macaroon torte, the Berslauer torte (with almonds and cherries), the Annatorte and the Dory torte — and even more.

Some people think the apple strudel is the most famous of Vienna's pastries, but others say it is the Sachertorte.

The Sachertorte was invented by Franz Sacher when he was chef to Prince Metternich, who was always asking the chef to invent something new. Since then there have been countless recipes for the "original."

There was even a law suit when the question arose as to who had the right to call his product "genuine" — the Hotel Sacher which traded on the family connection, or Demel's who had bought the right to use the chocolate seal, which says "Genuine Sachertorte."

Demel's head acquired the right from Edouard Sacher, the grandson of creator Franz Sacher. The recipe has been published in a Vienna cookbook by Hans Skrach. It starts out with 14 egg yolks, just to give you an idea.

This famous cake is a round, chcolate cake covered with a delicious fudge-like icing. Demel's has a thin layer of apricot marmalade beneath the icing, at the Hotel Sacher, the apricot jam is in the middle.

Palm Springs beckons with secluded resorts

By ROBERT BETTS

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. — There are more than 200 hotels, lodges and inns in this palmy desert resort — but not one motel.

At least they're not called that. The term "motel" is taboo here.

"We don't want to cheapen our image," said a Palm Springs Visitors and Convention Bureau official.

For that matter there aren't any tourists either — only "visitors" — 1.5 million of them a year.

"Rest and relaxation away from the hustle and bustle of that other word is what mainly attracts them," the official said.

"That and, of course, our famous sunshine."

Quiet refinement has been the watchword here since the "village" — as residents still like to refer to it — was founded as a retreat for film stars away from the gaudy glare of Hollywood. That's the way the locals want to keep it.

Strict building codes and rigid enforement of ordinances have the object of maintaining the kind of atmosphere which first beckoned those seeking relaxation in the desert. Large, garish, neon, blinking or otherwise "objectionable" signs are barred. So are drive-in restaurants which, in the opinion of city planners, "tend to downgrade the resort atmosphere."

One of the most exclusive is in fact a converted estate. The Ingelside Inn still could be mistaken for someone's private home. Big wrought iron gates give on to a winding drive, at the end of which stands a Rolls-Royce. The limousine is used to pick up guests from the airport.

The estate belonged nearly half a century ago to the Humphrey Birge family, fabricators of the fashionable Pierce Arrow auto. It passed into the hands of socially proper Palm Springs pioneer Ruth Hardy, who opened it as a secluded rendezvous for selected paying guests. The garage was turned into a dining room. Bungalows were added, together with formal garden, swimming pool, croquet and shuffleboard courts.

The guest book became a "Who's Who" of high society, politics, diplomacy, the arts, big business — and, of course, show business.

Howard Hughes registered there on Oct. 12, 1946, and paid $20 for one night's rest and recreation. John Wayne stayed there on Dec. 2, 1941. Greta Garbo found seclusion there. So did Elizabeth Taylor, Rita Hayworth, Katherine Hepburn, Bette Davis and many other stars. Their pictures smile down ontoday's guests from the walls of the inn's famous photo gallery.

When Ruth Hardy died, the inn was turned over to absentee ownership. It began to slide into history, a neglected, rusticating place of fading charm, forgotten by all but a few old-timers.

There are only 26 rooms. Suites for two go for up to $140 a night but a double room can be had for as low as $44 out of season and a single room for $30.

Meet some people who smiled at stewardesses on over 30 airlines last year.

Before we recommend an airline, we like to fly it first. To see if they live up to their advertising promises. If the service is first class . . . even in economy. If the meals are tasty. And how things are at various international airports.

We think it's important to have this firsthand experience. And since we're the largest travel agency in town, we do a lot of travelling.

Because we enjoy it.

And because of you.

We like to check everything first.

Creampuffs needn't apply for these rugged treks

ON THE GO with Jerry Hulse

ALBANY, Calif. — If your idea of roughing it is an air conditioned pad at the Plaza, skip this and turn to the comic pages instead.

"This column will bore you silly.

Today we're rounding up guys with lots of macho. Wives and sweethearts are welcome, too. Just as long as they get their kicks out of trekking through blizzards, canoeing through rapids, fighting for oxygen in the Himalayas and spooking tigers in the jungles of India.

Creampuffs needn't apply.

Unless you're willing to walk a mile for a Camel, forget. Tilt. Order a Jaguar instead (the kind with four wheels and a dozen cylinders).

With Mountain Travel, the agency that promotes the unusual in tour adventures, camels are very large. Indeed, they're used for outings in the Sahara.

If you've ever had a thirst for adventure in Nepal, the Valley of Swat, Samarkand, Thyangboche, Otavalo, Tikal, Narssarssuaq or other exotic destinations, get on the horn to Mountain Travel here in Albany. The offices are just across the bay from San Francisco.

For some, their trips are paradise, for others, purgatory. Because Mountain specializes in wilderness tours, the nearest you'll ever get to a Hilton is a tent on Everest. Or maybe a tree house in Africa.

Mostly you walk. It takes sturdy legs and a strong back. How else can you carry your own pack?

For 1977, Mountain Travel has programmed 70 trips ranging from bush walking in Tasmania to volcano climbing in the Ecuadorian and Bolivian Andes.

If a tour stops off in London or Paris or Rio, it's only to make connections to more distant destinations: Katmandu, Patagonia, Hunza, Bhutan and Darjeeling.

During the current year more than 70 treks are planned within the Himalayan kingdon of Nepal. If the arches are weak, try Cannes or Capri instead. Among Mountain Travel's targets are snow-plastered peaks rising to elevations of 23,000 feet or higrer.

For the tenderfoot there's an eight-day introductory trek through Sherpa villages in the foothills of Jugal Himal. Hearty souls who survive Jugal Himal must have the stamina of an Olympic miler. Lungs ache for oxygen. The feet bark back. Eyeballs grow weak in snowblinding passes.

For sheer joy, other masochists are signing up for treks to the high Tibetan plateau of Mustang, Nepal's most isolated province. To illustrate exactly how remote Mustang is, the locals still refuse to use the wheel and the elders continue to argue that the earth is flat.

While few Westerners have ever been granted permission to check out the action in Mustang, restrictions are expected to be lefted sometime this year. As a result, Mountain Travel is gearing for a 30-day trek during which members will hoof it as far as the mysterious walled city of Lo Mantang.

Such heady adventure will cost the customer $2,881, including the air fare from New York.

Others will be sputtering off by Land Rover from Katmandu to Trisuli Bazar to join Sherpas in a trek to the isolated city of Gurkha. A Mountain Travel spokesman points out that this will involve about six days of low-level walking — "good," he says, "for those not in such great shape."

Other Mountain Travel groups will visit the Royal Chipwan National Park to check out the endangered Asian wildlife, including the royal Bengal tiger plus leopards, the great Indian one-horned rhinoceros, wild boar and barking deer.

Included in the package are an elelphant safari, a game walk and a trip down the Narayani River by dugout canoe to eyeball the crocodiles and other wildlife.

Nights will be spent in tented camps, the price for the three-day adventure coming to $149 a person. Five, seven and ten-day itineraries are available as well.

Mountain Travel also is preparing a month-long trek to Hunza and the Yarkhun Valley of Pakistan. Members will clock 250 miles of unscouted trekking through seldom visited valleys and wind their way through the 17,000-foot Chillini and the 14,000-foot Karambar passes.

A Mountain leader guarantees "difficult glacier travel and some wild river crossings."

For this type of action, the agency asks $1,980 for the land arrangements.

Then there is a nine-day trek in the high alpine valley of Swat plus a four-day visit to the Kafir valley of Bumboret, all of which smacks of the adventures starring Alexander the Great.

Scratched this year due to political unrest is a 29-day hike among the Ruwenzori Mountains of Idi Amin's land of Uganda. With hopes for next year, the tour agency has prepared a brochure describing the expedition.

Meanwhile, Mountain Travel, in co-operation with Sobek Expeditions, has scheduled a rafting trip down the Blue Nile through the Grand Canyon of Africa, a mile-deep slash in the Ethiopian escarpment.

After a 12-mile hike into the canyon, guests will board rafts for a 10-day glide down the river, passing 15-storey pillars of stone, lunar-like chunks of columnar basalt and lava-encrusted caves and grottoes.

This 17-day trekking-rafting adventure is pegged at $960.

Sobek and Mountain also have teamed up to offer a tour down East Africa's Omo River, photographing hippos and crocodiles and exchanging pleasantries with the primitive Bodi tribesmen of the area.

It's Time to Battle Cabbage Chompers

By JACK BEASTALL

Any home gardener can forecast certain undesirable happenings that will take place in the months ahead. No need to figure the positions of the planets, nor gaze into a crystal ball, for these things happen every year.

The big question at the moment is this, how many gardeners are going to take steps to prevent a repetition this year, and in future years?

Not only is prevention better than cure, it is often the way to attain success.

This is true when various members of the cabbage family are attacked by the cabbage root maggot. Once the feeding roots have been devoured by the maggots there is little that can save the plants.

The cabbage root maggot has nothing to do with club root of cabbage, also known as finger-and-toe disease. Although the visible effects are similar, treatment is quite different.

In this instance the culprit is a fly, shown at (A) in the illustration, quite similar to a house fly but a little smaller amd more slender.

These flies appear in spring, having overwintered as puparia in the soil. Eggs are laid on, or near the cabbage stem where it enters the soil, as shown at (B).

In five to seven days the eggs hatch into small larvae, or maggots, which eventually grow to about one-third of an inch in length.

They immediately penetrate the soil and attach themselves to the roots of the plant, devouring the fine feeding roots for three or four weeks.

When fully grown they form what is known as puparia, a stage which corresponds to the crystalis of a butterfly. The puparia resemble grains of wheat in size and color, and may be found in the soil adjacent to infested plants.

During the summer months, two or three weeks are spent in this restive stage, after which adult flies again emerge from the soil. In fall, the puparia remain in the soil over winter.

To complicate matters for the home gardener, the spring emergence of flies continues for four to five weeks.

This means that the larvae of the first flies to emerge will have reached adult fly stage as the spring emergence ends, so there is a more or less continuous batch of larvae and adult flies throughout the summer.

The visible indication of an attack is a slight wilting of the foliage which is not corrected by watering the soil. Yellowing of the leaves follows, the plant fails to develop and eventually succumbs because its feeding roots have been devoured.

Prevention starts now, in the middle of winter. Since the fly lays its eggs only where the cabbage stem enters the soil, the gardeners's job is to prevent the fly from finding that spot.

A simple device that has been used for the last 60 years to my knowledge, is the cabbage mat. Making these mats was one of the winter jobs when I was young. At one time these could be purchased at any garden supply store for a few pennies, but like so many other simple and effective gardening devices, are now considered outdated.

The mats are made from heavy tarpaper, roofing felt, asphalt roll roofing, or discarded asphalt shingles.

Minimum size is eight inches square. At the centre point of the mat a one-inch hole is cut. If you are making many mats, a punch for this hole can be made by sharpening the end of a piece of one-inch water pipe as at (D).

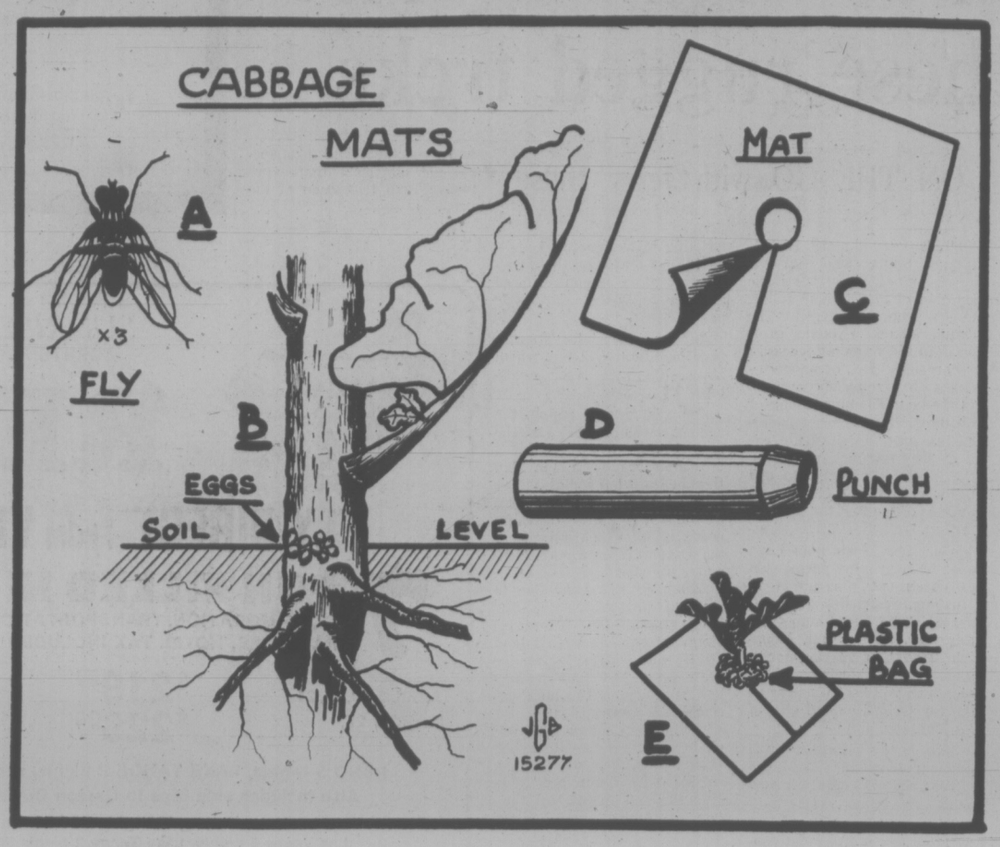
The next step is a slit from the centre of one side of the mat to the centre hole as shown at (C). This allows the mat to be placed around the cabbage after planting. It fits in place as illustrated at (E).

Since the cabbage stem does not fill the hole at the time of planting, the space has to be filled with some other material to prevent the fly from reaching the soil.

A suitable material today is the soft polythene bags used in vegetable markets. Collect these in coming weeks to use as "stuffers" to go around the cabbage stems before the mats are slipped into place see (E). Being soft the plastic will allow normal growth of the stem.

Each time a cabbage or related plant is harvested, pick up the mat, wash well, and store in a safe place. With care these mats will last for several years, especially when made from the heavier materials mentioned above.

Whether you grow your own plants of the cabbage family, or purchase young plants to set out, your time or money will not be wasted if cabbage mats are made during the winter evenings.



BOOM IN SMALL BUSINESS AMONG U.K. SURPRISES

MANCHESTER, England (CP) — Britain's uncertain economy has produced an upsurge of workers anxious to go into business for themselves.

"It is a case of skilled men being laid off and, rather than applying for government relief, using their savings and layoff pay to start up a small firm," said Joan Wardle, manager of the new Small Firms' Information Centre in Manchester.

Since November, the centre has handled more than 25,000 inquiries from persons living in the northwest area. The centre is one of 10 set up throughout Britain by the department of trade and industry.

"Our aim is to help small businesses because they are the ones that have no specialist departments of their own. Many of the inquiries we get are about retailing opportunities but the majority are from people with practical skills who have something to offer in the way of manufacturing."

On the surface, this enterprise seems to be a contradiction of conventional financial wisdom since no one expects a boom in new businesses at a time of acute recession.

"It may be a gamble but these, after all, are desperate times and there are enough examples of small businessmen doing well in the northwest to give heart to anyone setting out on his own," Miss Wardle said.

"The main thing is to determine whether the small man has a reasonable chance of success."

The northwest area has about 220,000 small firms which, by definition, provide employment for between one and 200 workers.

WORK FOR WEEK

By JACK BASTALL

When suitable weather offers opportunity for the work, get the garden seat and bench constructed; lay patio paving' or erect trellis or patio-block screen.

Store wood ashes and soot from wood fires in dry place to use later as side dressing for onions, garlic, leeks.

Plant good specimens of Jersualem artichokes in deep, humusy, well drained soil. These are a long season crop.

During the coming week, do the necessary pruning of fruit trees, especially if they are young and small.

Daffodils will soon be in bloom, at least the early varieties have buds showing. When color is seen, they may be given a light side dressing of balanced bulb fertilizer especially if not fed last year. Water in; if no rain.

Use spare time to make wood row markers, a wind-up garden line for getting seed rows straight, and name markers for the seed sowings large enough to read at a glance. These will last many years if gathered and stored each fall.

'Stripping' Draws Fire From Gov't

NORTH COWICHAN — An official of the B.C. highways department has censured the municipality for allowing continuous strip development along the Trans-Canada Highway.

W. E. Mercer, regional approving officer, said in a letter the department is "deeply concerned" about development along the controlled access highway.

"We are trying to protect the integrity of this corridor as there is substantial public investment in the existing facility with expenditures planned for the four-laning," he said.

Bakers Busy

WASHINGTON (AP) — About 95 per cent of all bread eaten in America is made by 24,000 commercial bakeries. Each year bakers use more than 15 billion pounds of flour, ground from more than 345 million bushels of wheat.

QUEBECERS EYE U.S. AS REFUGE

Times Quebec Bureau

MONTREAL — United States immigration officials say an increasing number of Quebecers are inquiring about emigrating to the United States since the November election of the Parti Quebecois government.

The increased interest has also been spurred by recent changes to U.S. immigration law which make it easier for qualified immigrants to get into the country.

"It's definitely picked up since the election," said George Lara, manager of the Vermont immigration office in St. Albans, about 75 miles southeast of Montreal. "People from Quebec are inquiring about how to start businesses down here."

Officials at the U.S. consulate in Montreal say they are receiving many requests from both English and French Quebecers on immigration procedures.

In the commercial division of the consulate, an unusually high number of requests are being received for information on investment in the United States, because investors don't need to be sponsored by an employer or a relative to be admitted to the U.S.

Under U.S. law, foreigners who invest more than $45,000 in a business enterprise and have more than one year's business experience can qualify for an immigration visa.

"They come in to ask about investing and then we find out what they're really interested in is immigrating," said one source at the consulate.

A spokesman said changes in U.S. immigration law which came into effect Jan. 1 have reduced the waiting period for qualified immigrants "and word of this has probably got around to a lot of people."

But immigration officials say they have no figures so far on how many applications have been processed from Quebec.

Part of the Quebec interest in U.S. investment is attributable to advertising campaigns mounted by some chambers-of-commerce and development agencies in U.S. border towns since the November election.

Officials of the northern Vermont town of Winooski claims that more than 60 Quebec corporations responded to a recent newspaper ad describing the business advantages of their area.

Banks in northern New York state reported a dramatic increase in deposits by Quebecers after the November election, although the trend is levelling off now.

"We've got a very large amount of money from Quebec sitting down here," said the manager of a bank in Plattsburgh, N.Y. "People have put their money in term deposits running anywhere from 0 days to six years, and all but five of our safety deposit boxes are rented out."

"With the separatists in control, a lot of people from Quebec say they're worried when they come in," said William Linney of Plattsburgh's National Commercial Bank. "Many of them are immigrants from Europe and Asia who say theey'v seen this sort of thing before."

PQ Ends English Courses

By DAN POTTIER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The Quebec government has cancelled federally-funded English language courses for immigrants which were to have begun this month, according to a senior official in the federal manpower department.

However, courses which began earlier were continuing and none had been ended in midstream, the official said in an interview Friday.

Quebec Labor and Immigration Minister Jacques Couture announced in January he would end these courses given in Quebec's centres d'Orientation et de Formation des Immigrants (COFI) as a means of stemming the flow of newcomers to the anglophone sector.

However, after meeting his federal counterpart Bud Cullen he said he would keep the courses if Ottawa surrendered to the province control over who qualifies for them.

Negotiations are still going on, the official said, but Ottawa failed to pursuade Couture to start the February courses as planned pending completion of the talks.

A spokesman for Couture said Quebec had received no new proposals on the matter from Ottawa and the courses were merely being phased out as planned by early March.

The manpower official said talks had been good so far and that "a more specific pitch will be made to Mr. Couture early next week."

As to the 15 to 25 people caught up in the dispute, the official said it was clear Ottawa would see that they got the courses one way or another because they needed them for their jobs.

However, pending negotiations Ottawa was paying them more manpower training allowances and not seeking alternative language courses for them for the time being.

If no resolution is found, he said, the people might be sent to Ontario for the lessons in the same way that immigrants outside Quebec who need to learn French for their jobs are sent to Quebec.

QUEBEC IMPORTS SOVIET CRUDE

MONTREAL (CP) — At least two Quebec refineries have received and processed shipments of crude oil from the Soviet Union in recent months, industry officials confirmed today.

But although imports of Soviet oil are believed to total about one million barrels in the last five months, details of the contractual arrangements remain shrouded in mystery.

Jim Allen, president of Golden Eagle Canada Ltd., said Soviet crude made up 10 per cent of capacity for the company's refinery near Quebec City in the last quarter of 1976.

He said Golden Eagle is refining the crude for a client whom he refused to name. He also would not say what price was paid for the Russian oil.

The one million barrels of imported oil is not in itself "a significant factor" in the Quebec petroleum market, Mr. Allen said.

A spokesman for Gulf Oil Canada Ltd. said the company's east-end Montreal refinery received a 348,000-barrel shipment of Soviet oil last May. It was shipped by tanker to Maine and sent through the Portland-Montreal pipeline.

It is believed that the Soviet Union charges less for its oil than the world price of more than $12 a barrel set by members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC).

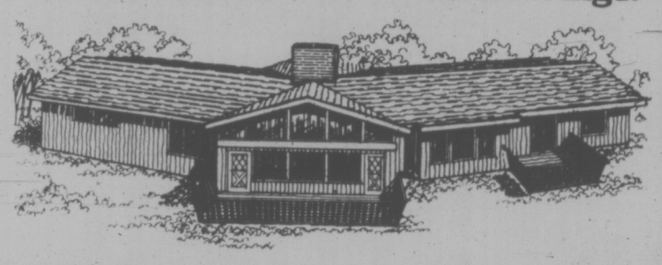
LINDAL CEDAR HOMES
A central core with moveable wings.



This single-story cedar-home design is as roomy as it is versatile—a welcome respite from today's mass of confining split-levels.

Ideal for the family that enjoys entertaining, its core or "center stage" features a spacious sunken living room with exposed beams and a huge fireplace wall (including a kitchen pass-through for hearthside snacks).

"Off-stage," one wing is occupied by an inviting entryway, a den and garage, while the other is devoted primarily to bedrooms. And both wings (the entire plan, in fact) can be tailored to suit individual needs. They might, for example, be joined at a sharper angle to accommodate a narrower lot.

All as a result of factory engineering and an unusually flexible building system. For more than 50 other applications, send $2 for our Planbook.

BP Women Mark Growth

MOHART
. . . banquet hostess

elizabeth forbes

In programs of business and professional women's clubs around the world, February is always shown as International Month.

Reason? In order that those clubs, through special gatherings in this month, may form an invisible chain to commemorate the birth of the International Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs at Geneva in 1930, and to mark its growth in the years since then.

Tonight, as a link in that invisible chain, members of clubs from the lower British Columbia mainland and the states of Washington and Oregon are here to join with the Victoria club at an international banquet in the Empress Hotel.

Local club president, Jean Mohart, will act as hostess. The guest speaker is June Menzies, vice-president of the Anti-Inflation Board.

It was in August, 1930, in the handsome, old wood panelled Salle Centrale on Geneva's Place de la Madeleine, that this international federation was formed.

Some 200 women from 16 countries were present at that meeting, among them representatives from the British Isles, the United States and Canada.

The federation was to be strictly non-partisan and non-sectarian.

Objectives were to promote friendly relations beteen the business and professional women of all countries, to co-operate in the interests they held in common and to work for high standards of service to communities and nations.

Now, almost 47 years later, Jean Mohart tells us the IFBPW has grown to include 64 federations and associate clubs with more than 220,000 members in 60 countries around the world.

Basically, she says, the objectives are the same "and we are still non-partisan and non-sectarian."

However, "changing life patterns have brought us increased responsibilities, especially in the fields of education, equality and human rights and certain others that develop from them.

"Now we must not only be involved, we must be seen to be involved, if we are to hold the respect our work has already earned around the world."

The IFBPW meets in congress every three years. Last gathering was in Buenos Aires in 1974 and the next is scheduled for Helsinki, in June this year.

In Buenos Aires, the theme for the triennial, Looking Toward The 21st Century, was divided into three sections, one for each year.

Full Recognition of women as People was the subject for study in 1975; women, Their Total Potential in 1976; and now in 1977, New Priorities in Changing Life Styles.

"In this final phase of the theme we are taking a look at ourselves and updating our thinking," Jean Mohart explains.

"That doesn't mean we're sitting back and watching the world go by. We are quite capable of self scrutiny and, at the same time, of pinpointing from that scrutiny where we are needed most."

That is not only true of clubs in Canada "it reaches into all countries where IFBPW is active."

Key words, as Mrs. Mohart sees it in every instance, are educational and participation.

"It's essential to concentrate on educating people to understand all aspects of equality and then to help them become active in working for elimination of all forms of discrimination."

Mrs. Mohart spoke of the international président, Prof. Nasher of Australia, and of her recent travels.

In early January she chaired an international executive committee meeting in Morocco and attended a seminar there called Muslim Woman, Her Full Potential, hosted by the newly formed Rabat Club.

Topics discussed were education, health, family planning, employment and legal status.

Prof. Nasher then came to Canada to speak at international month banquets in Toronto and Winnipeg and to attend a reception in Vancouver last weekend, before returing to Australia.

In every instance she pinpointed problems faced by women in developing countries as the struggle for preservation of the environment and removal of threats to human survival.

She also outlined problems of overpopulation, protection of women and children through elimination of illiteracy and the wiping out of malnutirtion.

In the western world she sees the emergence of a more highly educated and skilled "new woman" who can control her own fertility and is destined to live longer.

And she outlines the place such a woman will have in bringing new life styles into harmony with the rapid changes of the times.

She is using her talents and her efforts "to project the needs in changing lifestyle and the priorities of our international federation," Jean Mohart concluded, "and we, in our individual clubs, must help if those talents and efforts are to reach their full potential."

Among special guests at tonight's banquet at the Empress will be Canadian Federation president Helen Verdin of Edmonton and Mrs. D. Max Gray, Washington State president.

Birth Riskier Than Abortion

CHICAGO (AP) — Women who went through childbirth ran a risk of death nine times greater than those who had abortions performed by licensed physicians in the first three months of pregnancy, says a study of the years 1972-1974.

Dr. Willard Cates and three associates at the U.S. Centre for Disease Control in Atlanta conducted the study as part of the federal centre's surveillance of abortion-related deaths.

"Legal abortion in the United States in 1972 through 1974 was a relatively safe surgical procedure" with a death rate less than that for the removal of tonsils or appendix, concludes the study. The report appears in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

"When compared with mortality from pregnancy and childbirth, legal abortion in the first trimester was nearly nine times safer than carrying the pregnancy to term," the study says.

The study compares statistics for abortion-related deaths between 1972 and 1974 with similar figures for full-term pregnancies.

It says there were 3.9 maternal deaths for each 100,000 legally performed abortions, but the rate dropped to 1.7 when abortions were performed in the first three months of pregnancy.

The study cited figures of the National Centre for Health Statistics which showed the rate of maternal deaths related to pregnancy during the same period was 14.8 for each 100,000 live births.

Is Divorce the Next Taboo To Be Abolished in Spain?

MADRID (Reuter) — As Spain slowly breaks the spell of almost 40 years of dictatorship, divorce may be the next taboo to fall.

Legalization of divorce, unthinkable while Gen. Francisco Franco lived, is being considered by a government commission set up to review the social legislation he left behind.

The future of at least 200,000 Spaniards, legally separated but barred from remarrying, hangs on its decision.

Reports leaking from the commission's secret sessions are confused and contradictory. But a fierce public debate has already begun.

"Denying the freedom to divorce belongs to the same fanaticism which opposes blood transfusions or surgical operations," said the liberal newspaper Diario 16.

"The ban is one of the painful legacies of dictatorship which denands immediate revision in order to get Spain out of its antiquated and hypocritical situation regarding matters of the family."

"Divorce is a train without brakes," countered Prof. Rafael Navarro Valls in the right-wing daily Arriba. "Once set off, it is uncontrollable."

Navarro said that if divorce were introduced Spain would be left "only with the flotsam of wrecked families."

The issue has even been aired on state-controlled television which only in the last year has taken its first unsteady steps toward the screening of controversial subjects.

Reformists hope for a divorce law similar to that of the second Spanish republic of the 1930s. Article 43 of the republic's constitution said: "Marriage is based on the equal rights of both sexes and can be dissolved by mutual consent or on the petition of one of the partners pleading a just cause."

But in March, 1936, before the civil war was even over, Franco suspended the law by decree.

STEP-FAMILY HAS PROBLEMS

TORONTO (CP) — Step families, the product of marriages between divorced persons, are a phenomenon that is attracting increasing attention from social research groups.

In 1974, there were 15,277 divorces in Ontario and 56 per cent of them involved one or more dependent children. Given the marriage rate for divorced parents, this means some 12,600 of the children are likely to become members of stepfamilies.

Like all families, stepfamilies have their problems, with a few additional ones added.

For instance, does the child of a stepfamily tell his teacher that his father is not his natural father? Should relationships with natural parents be kept up. And what about the ambivalent feelings children and stepparents often have for each other.

Lillian Messinger, chief investigator of remarriage for the Clarke Institute of Psychiatry, says persons involved in second marriages don't like to talk about them..

"The tendency is to assume that the new family is serving the same function as the nuclear family — biological parents and their progeny — almost as if they would wish to wipe out the fact that there had been a previous marriage," she said.

But when children are involved, the new partners discover they aren't heading "one big happy family."

After studying 70 such couples, she found that at least 60 per cent of the children of divorced parents retained a relationship with the absent parent outside the new household.

Brenda and Fred Brown, not their real names, are unusual in that they prepared themselves and their children for remarriage.

"Our courtship involved the children very openly," said Mrs. Brown.

She brought three children to her second marriage, nine-year-old twin girls and an 11-year-old son. Her husband brought two sons, one nine and one six.

"We had real problems from the older children, in different ways — just a tremendous amount of anger, impotent anger, if you know what I mean," said Mrs. Brown. "They were threatening to leave home."

Fat Pom-Pons Easy to Make

KNIT and CHAT

By MAY E. Mac LEAN

Several readers have written asking how to make the really fat little pom-pons. As one lady puts it "When I make a pom-pon for anything, they always turn out just pieces of wool. How do you get those real round fuzzy pom-pons that I always see on someone else's work. The real fuzzy ones are what I mean, that cover bottles to make them look like dogs sitting up, and also the dolls' dresses that cover the spare toilet tissue too, and also make two-toned cushion covers?

There is a gadget that is in the notions departments of the bigger stores which will sell them, but I always make my own.

To make a small pom-pon, take a piece of cardboard about two inches wide and wind your wool around this several times, until it appears quite "fat." Slip off the cardboard and tie very tightly in the centre. Next cut the loops each end and fluff out.

Now with a sharp pair of scissors, give the pom-pon a real "hair-cut," reducing it ot the size you want. You can attach the pom-pon by leaving long strands of wool after you have tied the centre. I have found this a very successful way, and I am sure if you try this method out and experiment with the various time you need to wind the wool round the cardboard, you will soon get the hang of it.

Incidentally, if you need that pattern for spare toilet tissue holders, they are on Leaflet No. 0369. There are four styles, Top Hat in two different lacey stiches, one trimmed with flowers, the other with ribbon. Then there is a pretty little doll style made from mohair. On the reverse side of this same leaflet, there are instructions for Poodle tea coasies in two sizes, plus the Poodle spart toilet tissue holder. The leaflet incidentally does give instructions on making pom-pons.

If that last year's snow suit seems a little short on your little boy or girl, why not give it an extra lease of life by knitting new longer ribbing on four needles with double knitting wool? You can easily figure out the number of stitches if you consult a sock pattern. With an extra stitch on the sleeves and around the ankles, you might use one up as a second suit when they want to go out again to play.

Here is a new idea in crochet and one that will make you look extremely glamorous?! An intricate looking open-work pattern that is actually very easy to do! Romantic for evening wear, or make several to match your favorite ensembles.

To order this week's pattern No. 7702, send 75 cents in coin, PLUS a stamped self-addressed envelope, long one if possible. If you do not have an envelope or stamp, please enclose an extra quarter to cover the cost of handling and print your name and address. Send to: May E. Mac Lean, "KNIT AND CHAT," c-o Box B, 486 Montford Dr., Dolland des Ormeaux, P.Q., H9G 1M6.

Please be sure to state pattern numbers correctly and to enclose your stamped return envelope for faster service. Catalogues are no longer available. Allow about two weeks for normal delivery.

Woman Heads Legion

HALIFAX (CP) - Thirty-two years ago a group of veterans encouraged Mary Bishop to run as president of this city's Canadian Legion branch. She still holds the job today.

"There was quite a bit of male opposition when I first ran," she recalled in an interview just after her 32nd consecutive election victory.

Mrs. Bishop, a native of Peace River, Alta., was in the Canadian Women's Army Corps for 4½ years until she retired with the rank of sergeant in September, 1946.

"When we joined the army you had to work a lot harder than a man to get a promotion," she said.

Many readers write to me about problems of the fingernails. These are some of the most common areas of concern:

Brittle Nails: Most brittle nails are caused by substances like solvents, detergents, cleansers and soaps. Rarely are they due to any inner or metabolic factor in the body. Wearing protective gloves is thus the obvious answer. Will gelatin, or even yogurt, strengthen the nails? There is no scientific proof that this is so. There are some polishes and synthetic materials which can give greater strength to the nails. Too frequent removal of nail polish may be responsible for brittleness because of the drying action of the remover. Extreme cases should be discussed with a dermatologist.

Tiny white spots on the fingernails: These are usually due to some minor injury. Sometimes a fungus infection may be the cause. Expensive creams are wasteful. Mail-order "miracle cures" are usually disappointing.

Thickening of the ends of the fingers: This is known as "clubbing" of the fingers. In addition to the bulbous ends of the fingers, the nails become hard and markedly rounded. Such a condition should be brought to the attention of the doctor because chronic disorders of the lung or the heart may be responsible. Chronic bronchitis and emphysema are very often associated with clubbing of the fingers.

Hangnails: When skin around the sides of the nails are dried, the elasticity is lost and there is a tendency for cracks to form in the skin. Hangnails can also be caused by injury during manicuring, or with ordinary household implements. Hangnails should NOT be pulled. This further exposes the area to infection. The small piece of tissue should be cut off and the area lubricated.

Splitting of the nails: Almost always, slight injury to the nails will cause splitting or grooving. These grooves grow out in about four months — enough time to give thought to prevention of future injuries.

Dear Lynn and Joel: In one of your columns you said that the Piggybacks are the Geminis of the plant kingdom. Do plants really have zodiac signs? If so, could you please tell me what they are? It would be nice to give astrological plants for birthdays. — Pat B., Folsom, Calif.

Here it is once again, Lynn and Joel's Hortoscope:

Aries — Begonia
Gemini — Piggyback
Leo — Croton
Libra — Dracaena

Mail-Order Book Provides Style

BUCHAREST (AP) — Stylish Romanian women pick their dresses from western catalogues, although the mail-order houses are inaccessible to them.

They solve the problem by ripping out the catalogue page, going to their tailor and telling him, "Make me a dress like this."

"We have special tailor shops that will make what we want," a 23-year-old secretary explained. "And we make some things ourselves."

Fashion magazines and catalogues are prized in East Bloc countries, where style takes a back seat to uniformity. Romania imports as little as possible to save foreign currency for its industrial development.

"We have three big shops," said a young woman wearing a turquoise turtleneck sweater and dark shirt. "But they don't always have the things we want."

Friends and relatives in western countries are the source of most of the magazines and clothes that find their way into the country.

"The tailors are very good," the secretary said. "We choose the material, which is Romanian-made. The quality of the work is good, but the material is less good."

A tailor-made dress costs 400 to 500 lei (about $40).

By HARRIET HART

Your color TV set may need more maintenance than your other home equipment because of its complexity.

The 12-page folder "Color TV" offers advice with regard to buying a color TV set and having it installed and serviced. It points out that the quality of the picture depends on several factors, such as the distance of your set from the transmitter and the location of your home. Homes in a higher location have usually better reception than those in a valley. In most cases a good outside antenna will noticeably improve reception and give a more stable color picture.

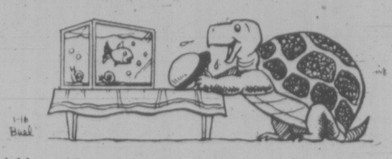
The folder makes it clear that because a technician needs precision equipment which he cannot carry around, he sometimes has to take a set to the shop for servicing. Also, it often happens that once a technician has replaced a faulty tube, another tube goes on the blink a few days later and, erroneously, many customers think there should be no charge for his second visit.

In addition, the folder offers hints on what you can do before you decide to call a TV technician. For instance, refer to your operating manual and check the various points it mentions.

This useful folder is available from your nearest Better Business Bureau and from BBB of Canada, 76 St. Clair Avenue West, Toronto, Ontario M4V 1N2. With your request please enclose a long (No. 10) self-addressed, stamped envelope, and allow at least 1-3 weeks for delivery. Don't forget to indicate your postal zone.

Herkie Won't Eat His Vegetables

By DR. FRANK MILLER



DEAR DR. MILLER: Herkie, my turtle, is eight years old. He measures (shell) 5¼ by 4 inches! He eats cooked or raw hamburger or lamb (which I eat, too). He eats a little frozen shrimp and loves snails out of my fish tank. He gets his vitamins on his hamburger. I've worried over the years because he's never seemed excited about vegetables. Am I going to have to do something about that some day, or will he just keep on going without them? — L.K.

DEAR L.K.: Since Herkie hasn't hankered for vegetables in eight years, it's likely he'll leave them alone from here on. While vegetables might be good for him, it's unlikely they're essential, at least not on the basis of his performance to date.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Is it healthier for a parakeet to lose a few feathers now and then, or is it better if they do that molting business all at one time? My Bertie here is a few feather loser — N.W.

DEAR N.W.: It's normal for a mature parakeet to undergo a complete molt once a year, shortly after the breeding season. This molt takes place over a period of several weeks, gradually enough so that the bird is not "nudified" in the process, but it still puts a considerable strain on the bird. From that standpoint, Bertie's technique of dropping a few now and then is considerably less stressful. Conversely, though, many factors relating to a caged bird's existence (abnormal light patterns, humidity, heat and food) tend to lower the bird's vitality and promote the lose-a-couple-grow-a-couple feather replacement technique.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Is a barking dog really trying to say something or is he just making noise? — A.H.

DEAR A.H.: Most canine vocalizations are quite specific. For example, a rumbling growl from a dog's throat carries an urgent message most can quickly understand. On occasion, though, canines carry on a sometimes one-sided conversation which means very little (this "capability" is carried to extremes in Homo sapiens...). The gamut runs from the bitch's parental palaver to a puppy, to the insistent barking of the over-confined, undertrained, bored-to-tears canine who bark because there's nothing better to do.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Someone said it's better to take away a male cat's "doodads" when he's not in heat. They said male cats quit chasing in the late fall and that's a good time to do it. So I've been waiting to have Mister done when he stopped. But he never did. How long should I wait? — G.F.

DEAR G.F.: If Mister hasn't paused by now, he probably isn't planning to — the sooner has "doodads" are deleted the better.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Bruiser, my five-month-old Great Dane, grows some every day. You can almost see it. But because I want him to grow as big as possible, I'd like to know if there is something I could give him that would make him grow even faster. Besides the vitamins I'm giving him now, I mean. — B.D.

DEAR B.D.: The more rapid the rate of growth, the more likely Bruiser's going to develop defects, particularly in his bones. His own doctor should be consulted regarding his diet and appropriate supplementation. The goal is to maintain adequate nutrition during this rapid growth process, NOT to strike for an even greater growth rate.

DEAR DR. MILLER: I watched a fight on television between a poison snake and a mongoose. The mongoose won. How come they always win? — O.T.

DEAR O.T.: The mongoose doesn't always win, but usually does. When an adder or a cobra strikes, it seldom makes allowance for the fact that the part aimed at may not be there by the time the fangs reach the spot. Snakes have excellent vision; if their timing mechanism were as good, they would be considerably more deadly. The snake will miss the mongoose, who moves repeatedly past the snake so rapidly that the fangs land behind its body. Should the mongoose make a mistake, well then it doesn't win the battle, but the odds are on its side because it's quick and the snake has never learned to aim ahead of a rapidly moving target.

DEAR DR. MILLER: My dog in past summers would get stickers in his ear and hold his head way over to one side. He's fine right now. It's Chortle, my parakeet, I'm worried about. She's been holding her head way over to one side the same way. I know she's got ears, though I never see them, but she couldn't have anything in one, could she? She never gets out of her cage, so I don't see how. She's eating slower now, too, so I guess I should take her in to a doctor for a look-see? — N.R.

DEAR N.R.: Yes, you should have (long before this reply reaches you). Chortle's head-tilt certainly could be due to an ear problem, more likely injury or infection than a foreign body. There are other probable causes for head-tilt, too. Most of them serious. Any time a bird slows up on eating, even when there are no such obvious physical signs of a problem, a check-up, and promptly, is prudent.

Foxes on Skis

NEW YORK (CP) — Two ski looks that have shown up in St. Moritz this season look good off the slopes too. At Yves St. Tropez here, boutique owner Robert Begeliter says his ombred foxes are selling well and one of the prettiest is a short jacket in beige tones. Jerry Sorbara's all-encompasing cape-poncho in coyote, complete with tail trim, also is a big seller.

Drop Fatty Meat

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians are eating a good variety of foods, but certain age groups should improve their eating habits, says a report released Monday by the health department.

The Nutrition Canada Food Consumption Patterns Report, an anlysis of the information collected during the 1972 Nutrition Canada survey, recommends that:

—Teenaged and adult women, as well as elderly men, eat more dairy products because of calcium shortages in their diet.

—Fat levels be lowered in diets by reducing the amounnt of high-fat meat.

—Women over the age of 12 and men between the ages of 30 and 39 should increase their intake of cereal products to increase thiamine and iron levels in their diets.

—Pregnant women should eat more dairy products, fruit and vegetables to add more calcium and folic acid to their diets. If pregnant women drank more milk they would not need vitamin and mineral supplements except for iron and folic acid.

The report says 40 per cent of total calorie intake is derived from fat, 13-14 per cent from protein and about seven per cent from high-sugar foods.

dear abby

Hunter Loves It

DEAR ABBY: May I say something in behalf of hunting? Hunters have been lied about, framed and given a bad name in recent years. I am an avid hunter, and I know that America's legal hunters are doing our wildlife a great favor. I am not referring to proachers or "sport" hunters, who kill the animal painfully, then leave it to die.

Our wildlife herds need to be thinned. Leave a deer herd of 40 alone, and it will multiply until there is not enough food for all. Many deer will die slowly and horribly, rather than quickly from the clean shot of a skilled hunter. The same goes for animals that are not eaten. They need to be thinned, too. And by the way, Abby, what are these animals there for in the first place — Hunter

DEAR HUNTER: Considering the way people are decimated — by wars, overpopulation and disease — might one ask what people are "there for in the first place?" any ideas?

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem that is worrying me terribly because I am a very sensitive person.

My boyfriend whom I love very much has just told me why he has avoided kissing me lately. (I noticed that he had, but I didn't want to ask him why.)

He said he hated to hurt my feelings, then he blurted out that he thinks my tongue is too big, and it feels "rough" to the touch.

I am 25 and am dieting strenuously, hoping I will lose weight in my tongue, too. But what about the roughness? — Unkissed

DEAR UNKISSED: Your boyfriend's reason for avoiding your kisses sounds pretty weird to me. It would be easier by far to find another boyfriend than to alter the size and surface of your tongue. If I were you, I'd lose this kook.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 66-year-old man who has been singing professionally since age seven. (My father was a famous singer.)

During the '60s, I visited over 300 churches. On my own I conducted a survey containing one question that could be answered voluntarily (and would be kept confidential): "Why do you attend chruch?"

The response was both revealing and surprising. More than 50 per cent wrote: "Because it's the thing to do."

To date, of the 195 churces I have visited, I was spoken to only once by someone other than an official "greeter" — and that was to ask me to please move my feet — Sincerely, John Charles Thomas, Jr., Ph.D.

DEAR Dr. THOMAS: I find your survey discouraging, but fascinating.

When you complete your three-year survey on hospitality (or the lack of it) in churches, please send it to me, and I'll share it with my readers.

THE HIDING PLACE
ASKS THE QUESTION
WHY DOES A GOD OF LOVE PERMIT EVIL?
THE BIBLE GIVES THE BEAUTIFUL ANSWER
When Pilate asks our Lord "Knowest Thou not that I have power to crucify Thee and power to release Thee?" Jesus answered him "Thou couldst have no power at all except it were given thee of my Father." John 19:10, 11. Does this mean that God allows evil to happen? The above Scriptures seem to say that, don't they?
Our whole life experience proves this, death, disease, wars, corruption, pollution of the environment, starvation in a world of plenty, etc., etc.
But there's another side to this coin, God knows as we do, experience is the best teacher, soon God's kingdom will be established as Christians are told to pray "Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on Earth as it is in Heaven" and when men return in the Resurrection, they will appreciate God's righteous loving leadership, because of their first-hand experience with evil. Rev. Neville Cryer

Bible expert coming to Victoria Friday

Rev. Neville Cryer, general director of the British and Foreign Bible Society, will be guest speaker at the 105th annual meeting of the Victoria branch of the Canadian Bible Society in St. John's Anglican Church at 8 p.m. Friday.

Cryer, an Anglican, served parishes in Derby, Ilkeston, Manchester and Croydon and was home secretary of the Conference of British Missionary Societies before taking his present post in 1970.

He reads every major European language and has translated several books into English from German, French, Swedish and Dutch. He is currently learning African and Far Eastern languages.

His first book was a short biography of John Eliot, the first missionary in the U.S. to preach to the American Indians in one of their tongues, Algonquin, and to make Bible translations into that language.

Cryer served with the 7th Rajputs in India in the Second World War. A scholar of Manchester Grammar School, he graduated in modern history at Oxford before the war. He later studied theology at Ridley Hall, Cambridge, and was ordained.

A keen rugger player, he also earned a lacrosse blue at both universities.

His main responsibilities as general director of the Bible Society are the building of links with churches at headquarters and leadership level, supervision of the society's production, promotion and fund-raising activities, serving on the European committee of Bible societies and representing the interests of the society to the United Bible Society partnership.

The British and Foreign Bible Society is the parent organization of the Canadian society which needs about $1 million a year in contributions to supply Bible translations outside Canada. The 1976 budget of the Victoria branch was $30,000 which was exceeded with contributions reaching a record level.

Rev. W. J. Hill of St. Michael and All Angels Anglican Church, Royal Oak, is president of the Victoria branch.

The programs are sponsored jointly by Anglican, Catholic, Lutheran, Presbyterian and United Churches of Canada.

The focus this year is on food.

They will tell it at the dinner meeting of the Full Gospel Businessmen's Fellowship International in the Empress Hotel at 6:30 p.m. Feb. 28.

The Morrisons conduct a counselling ministry to young couples and teach an adult Sunday school class in Houston Evangelistic Temple Church, where Tom is an elder.

Tickets are available at Fleming Review Printing, 821 Yates; Jennings Florists, Shelbourne Plaza, and Rev. D. L. McMillan, 2252 Sooke Road, 478-5293.

Church readies lottery blow

The United Church of Canada has a long tradition of opposition to gambling in any form and has condemned lotteries as being wasteful and evidence of poor stewardship.

A report is being prepared for the 27th General Council of the church to be held in Calgary next August.

Pancake luncheon at First United

The annual pancake luncheon at First United Church will be held after this Sunday morning's service in the fellowship hall by the Hi-C club of the church.

One of five under treatment

Millions suffering leprosy

Although some people believe that leprosy is a disease of the past there are, in fact, upwards of 12 million cases in the world which have not been treated.

This is one of the points made forcibly by Rev. Fred Schimke, area representative of The Leprosy Mission of Canada, now visiting Victoria.

Schimke, who lives in Abbotsford, is addressing local church groups until Feb. 27.

Also appearing on speaking engagements on the Island is Trudy Baumann, a registered nurse, who is on furlough from Naini, India, where she has served in the leprosy hospital for the past 11 years.

According to Schimke leprosy can be cured with powerful yet relatively inexpensive drugs.

The dreaded disfigurement and deformities can be prevented by early treatment and education and, if they have already occurred, can be corrected by tendon transplants and other surgical techniques.

Only one out of five of the world's more than 15 million sufferers are under treatment, Schimke said.

The Leprosy Mission has been in the field for more than a century with a Canadian support operation since 1892.

The international office of the mission in London, England, supervises the field work in 35 Third World countries. The interdenominational work is supported by almost all Protestant church groups.

Schimke will speak at 9:45 a.m. Sunday in Douglas Street Baptist and at 10:30 a.m. in Elk Lake Baptist. At 7 p.m. Sunday he will be at Emmanuel Baptist and at 8 p.m. at Brentwood United.

At 2:30 p.m. Tuesday he will give a talk on his work at Saanich Peninsula Hospital and at 8 p.m. will address a group in First Baptist Church.

Miss Baumann will accompany the area representative at some meetings and will also speak in Duncan and Nanaimo.

Schimke's other appearances: Wednesday, 2:30 p.m., at St. Paul's United Church, Sidney; and 7:30 p.m. Lambrick Park Church, Thursday, 1:30 p.m. Home League, Salvation Army, Esquimalt; 8 p.m. Evangelican Free Church. Friday, 9 a.m., Christian elementary school.

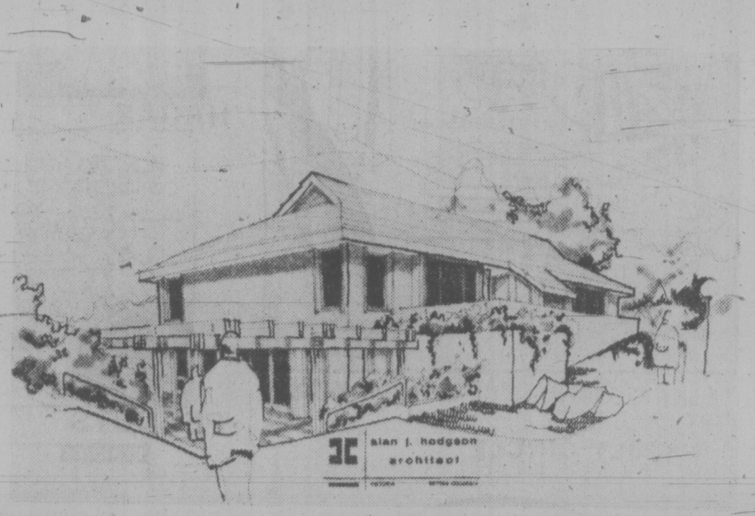
Next Sunday he will be at St. Martin - in - the - Fields at 10:30 a.m. and at Douglas Street Baptist at 7:30 p.m.

New Calnan Memorial Organ dedication recital Tuesday

The newly-installed Calnan Memorial Organ will be dedicated and Jack Lenaghan will give a recital in St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church, 745 West Burnside Road, at 8 p.m. Tuesday.

Lenaghan will play works by Bach, Walond, Vierne and others. He came to St Joseph's in 1973 after five years as organist at St. Andrew's Cathedral.

He studied organ with Dr. Stanley Oliver and Kenneth Cunningham of Montreal and holds of licentiate with Trinity College of Music, London, England.



Gorge group adding four units

The Gorge View Society, sponsored by the Victoria Presbytery of the United Church of Canada, is building four new units for senior citizens at its complex on Chown Place off Harriet Road.

A contract has been signed with Herb Bate Ltd. for construction of a two-storey building containing the four units with an activity area and laundry facilities at a cost of $157,387.

The new construction will be in the same cottage style as the existing buildings.

The Gorge View Society was founded in 1956 to supply low-cost housing for senior adults. The first building was completed in 1960 for eight tenants.

By 1974 the 10th building had been finished and 80 tenants were being accommodated. All buildings were fully paid for by 1976.

The new building is scheduled for completion in July.

Christopher founder dies at 76

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Rev. James Keller, who founded the Roman Catholic Christopher movement based on the belief that one person could change the world, has died at the age of 76.

Father Keller, who set up The Christophers, Inc., in 1945, died in hospital. A victim of Parkinson's Disease, he had been in hospital since last November.

MARK TRAIL

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By SYDNEY OMARR
Sunday, February 20

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Lunar cycle high — take initiative. Make new start in new directions. Utilize natural pioneering instincts. One who sits on sidelines will aid your cause as you make an extra effort. Cancer, Capricorn figure in scenario.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You gain access to privileged information. Clandestine meeting could be on agenda. Much that occurs is backstage, oblique as contrasted to forceful or direct. Long-distance communication figures prominently. Gemini, Sagittarius play key roles.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Review, revise and rebuild. Read between the lines — be aware of fine print. Accent on romance, desire, ability to be a friend. A wish is fulfilled as "ally" appears at your side. Aquarius, Taurus, Scorpio persons may be in picture.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Emphasis on achievement, climbing to the top, relating to superiors, elevating standing in community. Gemini, Virgo could figure in important changes. Put together puzzle pieces. Analyze, draw deductions — and trust yourself.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Good Moon aspect coincides now with warmth, affection, ability to communicate ideas. Family members are closer — domestic changes, adjustments prove favorable. Taurus, Aries and Libra figure in scenario. You learn now by making inquiries, long-distance and otherwise.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Dig beneath layers of pretense. Get to heart of matters. Partner, mate is very much in picture — and discussion concerning budget is in order. You are concerned with feelings, love — you may find that the abstract is very real indeed.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Emphasis on co-ordinating efforts with one who shares goal. Partner, mate, contract — these come into focus. Key is to organize. Priorities become obvious — but you have to do something about defining terms, refining techniques. Capricorn, Cancer figure prominently.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Leave no loose ends. Job that has been "left hanging" could haunt you — unless you finish it. Check calendar for upcoming dental, medical appointments. Resolve to keep those recent resolutions! You receive meaningful compliment from colleague.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Highlight ability to dramatize, illustrate interests and needs. Leo is in picture. Accent on change, variety, children, affairs of heart. New starts, added independence are indicated. You'll be in centre of spotlight!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Practical matters dominate. Concentrate on security. Take nothing for granted, especially where family or property matters enter picture. Older individual wants to aid — don't let false pride stand in way. Cancer — and another Capricorn — could be part of scenario.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Emphasis on short journeys, brothers, sisters and other relatives — you give and receive gifts . . . a "special occasion" is on agenda. Social active accelerates. Highlight versatility — and humor. If willing to smile at personal foibles, you will win.

PISCES (FEb. 19-March 20): Accent on money, how to obtain it, save it and invest it. A spiritual counselor may actually aid in a very worldly manner. Be receptive. Taurus, Leo and Scorpio individuals could figure prominently. Old debt could be repaid.

IF FEBRUARY 20th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are sensitive, emotional, impressionable. You are considered psychic by many associates and friends. You make new starts this year, will be more independent, get proverbial second chance — and you could find or rediscover love. July should be one of your most significant months. Cancer, Capricorn persons play important roles in your life.

Astrological Forecast for
By SYDNEY OMARR
Monday, February 21

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Flexibility is more important than might be imagined. Keep wary eye on legalities, rights, permissions. You have chance to expand — if versatile. Policy changes occur. There are negotiations — and renegotiations. Know it and be ready for alternatives, contingencies.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Someone has a secret and wants to reveal it — to you. Refuse to become inextricably involved. Check fine points, read between the lines — strengthen security base. One confined to home, hospital deserves call or visit.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): If desire is to be fulfilled, get ready for significant change that may include travel. Gain indicated through written word; what you took for granted has more value than might be imagined. Virgo, Libra, Scorpio could be in picture.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Challenge is good at this time. Know it and don't brood. You'll have real opportunity to vindicate views, to advance, to let superiors become familiar with your assets, abilities. Leo, Aquarius persons figure in picture.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Perceive situation as it exists, not merely as you might wish it to be. Accent on special relationship, affair of heart, emotional responses. Member of opposite sex is most definitely involved. Young person could make unreasonable demands. Avoid extravagance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Study Leo message. Organize priorities — protect interests, financial and emotional. Relative, without meaning to be destructive, might do something foolish. Know it and be self-reliant. Don't fall prey to sob stories — steer clear of one who constantly sings the blues.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Status quo gets shakeup — what had been regarded as settled or routine is likely to be something entirely different. Legal matters, money affairs grab spotlight. Partner or mate has much to say and do — and there are "minor explosions."

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): What had been a discouraging situation now takes on air of optimism. Accent on routine, work, health, ability to obtain and perform needed, special services. New starts, more independence, fresh contacts are indicated. And your could also fall madly in love!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Intrigue is in picture — you have a choice between flirtation and a solid relationship. Degree of maturity will decide your choice. Follow through on inner feelings. You have answer to dilemma. However, you may be wishing for a fantasy-land solution. The "Easter Bunny," sad though it may be, is too elusive to be reliable.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Inquiries are made concerning your abilities, references, claims. Know it and be ready for "serious" questions. Gemini, Sagittarius persons figure prominently. You could draw to you person with delusions of grandeur. Be discriminating!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Setady approach brings best results — stay out of traffic, if possible. Relative could be stubborn, aching for a confrontation. Know it and remain cool. Logjam is removed from area of professional advancement.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Check costs — be a comparison shopper. Protect valuables, personal possessions. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons figure in picture. Key now is to collect, analyze, to get rid of superfluous objects and methods. This is streamline time. Know it and do something about it.

IF FEBRUARY 21st IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are versatile, have sense of comedy, love to eat and travel and you are a sensitive, romantic individual. Gemini, Sagittarius persons play important roles in your life. June should be your most significant month of 1977, a year which sees you consolidating efforts, gaining co-operation of one who can aid in emotional and financial sense. If single, you could marry. If married, there might be an addition to family.

Network: Glib and Messianic

A movie review by Nora Hutchison

Network is a vehement tirade directed against television, 1970s American society, conglomerates and multi-national corporations, revolutionary groups, tough career women, and the generation that has learned life from the Bugs Bunny Show — the generation whose only reality, says Paddy Chayefsky, comes to them over a television set. Screen writer Chayefsky's movie blasts us for our passivity towards the medium that's "turning us into humanoids, unable to feel pain and love." Chayefsky's movie says that we're losing our souls to the tube.

Network is a glib, messianic farce about the politics of the television rating game, and it's full of gibes about one of the god-head figures of contemporary American culture, the television anchorman. In Chayefsky's comedy, UBS, America's fourth network, is suffering from a season of lousy ratings, and Howard Beal (Peter Finch), whose news report is one of the principle offenders, has been given two weeks' notice by network executives who want to bring a little show-biz to the news hour. But Beal isn't ready to go quietly. On air, he cusses and damns the network, the business of reporting the news, and the "demented slaughterhouse of a world we live in." As he's strong-armed off-camera, his ratings soar. The network execs rehire him, fire his best friend, Max Schumacher, the head of the news division (William Holden), and turn the show over to the vice-president in charge of programming, a power-hungry career girl named Diana (Faye Dunaway) who advertizes him as the "Mad Prophet of the Airwaves."

Beal begins to believe his new image and starts to have visions. The producers are impressed with his hysterical fervor, and to show him how much he means to them they add a plastic rose-window and a soothsayer from Wall Street. Howard 'articulates the popular rage," Diana delightedly tells Max, and then, as if to compensate for having stolen his job, she initiates an affair. Max enjoys her attentions for a while. There's something quite extraordinary about being made love to by a beautiful blonde who moans rating statistics while she's coming to orgasm.

Eventually, though, like Howard, Max is beset by visions, but his are of wife and home, grandchildren and a loving family gathered round. Dianna is his "last roar of passion" before the menopausal years set in. Dramatically, he denounces her as one of the soulless masses. She's as empty of feelings, he tells her, as are the programs she creates for the tube.

William Holden has aged in a craggy, homely fashion, and he's extremely likable, even in this role of a man who believes himself to be morally superior to almost everyone else. Holden makes us feel that Max honestly believes that he does have special fix on the truth. Faye Dunaway is fine when she's being bitchy and bouncy, and she turns the Dianna character into an amusing caricature of the power-mad career woman.

But neither Dunaway nor Holden can distract us from the late Peter Finch, who plays Howard Beal with a reserve of satiric sense that more often than not counteracts the constant harangue of Chayefsky's message. Finch was a capable, shrewd and subtle actor who always left us with the feeling that there was much more to the character he was playing than he cared to reveal to the camera.

In this role, Finch really makes us believe that Howard is capable of the metamorphosis from the complacent anchor-man father-figure to the zealot who is fed up with spelling out homogenized half-truths. Howard, the visionary, believes in the therapeutic power of voicing anger and gut responses and, in that respect, he's really the only element we can sympathize with in Chayefsky's otherwise noisy, venomous diatribe. It may not have been Finch's most challenging or successful performance, but it's a good one to remember him by.

Beal's supreme moment comes when he exhorts his viewers to stick their heads out of their windows and yell "I'm as mad as hell and I'm not going to take this anymore!" And when, from Baton Rouge to Spokane the viewers obey, the network executives glory in their triumph. They read the success of Beal's Mad Prophet act as a fantastic ratings gimmick, and it never occurs to them that he might have planned to strike a real nerve — or that his audience might really be fed-up.

It's at this point that Chayefsky and the movie go awry. Chayefsky likes to make huge billboard kinds of statements — as if he isn't sure we'll get the message in a smaller format — and he's so intent in slashing away at all his current frustrations that he doesn't take the time to develop either his characters or the situations that they find themselves in.

Dunaway . . . moaning rating statistics

We never do discover whether Beal's audience stuck their heads out the window in sheepish obeyance of the tube's dictates, or whether it was their first act of retaliation against the medium, because Chayefsky splits off into other directions — a winding down of Max and Diana's affair, a parody of an extremist liberation group who agree to perform terrorist acts on a weekly basis for the TV cameras, and a satiric sequence involving the power politics of multi-national corporations.

Howard's exhorts of individual protestation against the godless, computerized society take a tack to the right when the head of the conglomerate which owns UBS tells him that the multi-national corporate state is the natural order of things, and that the perfect world would be "one vast ecumenical holding company." Somehow, Beal is converted by this corporate cosmology and is soon asking his audiences if "dehumanization is such a bad word?" His audiences don't understand Howard's about-turn (and neither do we) and his ratings drop. The network wants to fire him but the president of the conglomerate likes his wild-eyed charm and plans to keep him on. The network executives hatch a plan with the terrorists to kill him off.

Chayefsky's about turn is as confusing as Howard's. The movie is really just about the inner workings of network television— with a splendid central gag turning on the murder of an anchorman who needs to be killed off because of his lousy ratings — but Chayefsky has complicated matters incredibly by trying to make it something more. For the first half of the movie, he appears to hold television responsible for the dehumanization of western society, and then swivels one hundred and eighty degrees and says that individual lives are valueless anyway, and that we're foolish not to recognize that as fact. We all know that television has been responsible for many changes in our society, but there's no evidence to show that we've lost our souls to TV or to any other entertainment medium.

Chayefsky may think he's explaining something about the effect of television on society — it makes us "indifferent to suffering" he says, and "to joy . . . life is reduced to banality . . . the daily business of life is a corrupt comedy," but his movie is mostly just a middle-aged view of the younger generation — godless, worshipping false shrines, infatuated with their own images. There's nothing new to his vision — it's just wrapped in media-hype — in order to sell.

TITLE HIDES TRUTH

The Ozark Mountain Daredevils don't exactly sail under false colors, but neither are they entirely true to their title, according to their manager.

Despite a bluegrass - barnyard brand of music and the fac fact that members of the group do indeed hail from the hilly country of Missouri and Arkansas, the Daredevils are also globetrotting sophisticates.

In fact the Daredevils' biggest hit, Jackie Blue, departs entirely from the bluegrass image to evoke the coastal pop sound of the Beach Boys: and their initial chart record, If You Want to Get to Heaven, rocked with the souped-up horsepower of Take it Easy or Free Bird.

The group will be performing in Victoria at the Royal Theatre next Saturday with Jonathon Edwards and Fosterchild.

Their fourth and newest album, Men From Earth, contains pop ballads, more indigenous pastoral songs and tracks that combine elements of several modes.

No matter what style they're working in the Daredevils sing their harmonies and play their electric guitars, mandolins, saxes and harps with assurance, imagination and zeal.

Saint Peter Excluded From Ad Ban

YELLOWKNIFE (CP) — Arnold McCallum, minister of education for the Northwest Territories, has said "thanks but no thanks" to some unsolicited recruiting help his department has been getting.

McCallum said in a press release he is concerned by some classified ads which have appeared recently in large Canadian daily newspapers asking for "christian teachers" in the north.

The ads, which were not placed by the government, have appeared in the Montreal Star, the Ottawa Citizen and the Vancouver Sun, he said.

One ad cautioned: "Unless you have personally experienced the reality of the living Christ in your life, you need not apply."

McCallum said he had "one heck of a lot of respect for the Lord," but didn't need anyone outside his department preparing recruitment ads and placing them without authorization.

"Unless of course, the ads are delivered to the newspapers by St. Peter himself," he said.

Stella Coultas At Open Space

A selection of recent works by Victoria artist Stella Coultas comes up next at Open Space's temporary gallery at 1960 Government. The exhibition opens Monday at 8 p.m. and is comprised of 20 unique sculptural canvasses.

"I have been attempting to take the two-dimensional painting off the wall and integrate it into the three dimensional surroundings," says Ms. Coultas.

Concurrently with this exhibition, Secession Gallery of photography will be showing photographs by Robert Bourdeau of landscapes of Ontario and Quebec, mostly done with a large format camera.

These shows run through March 5 with gallery hours being 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday to Friday and 12 to 5 p.m. on Saturdays.

Solitudes, an exhibition of oils and acrylics by Victoria painter Dorothy Haegert goes on display next Saturday at Karibu's Upper Gallery, 565 Johnson. The artist's subjects include the natural and domestic environment.

There will be a previewing of Solitudes, Friday, 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. and the gallery will also he open Feb. 27 from 2 to 4 p.m. All showings are open to the public.

An exhibition of pottery by Gordon Thorlaksson, internationally recognized West Coast potter who works in ceramics inspired by the classical tradition of the imperial dynasties of China, together with tapestries of Pauline McLean, will open at the The Quest gallery, 1023 Government, March 3.

Ms. McLean has exhibited extensively and one of her works is in the provincial collection of the B.C. government.

At the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria there is one more week in which to view a stunning exhibition of the contemporary calligraphy of Japan as exemplified by masters of the art. The massive and unprecedented display ends Sunday, Feb. 27.

It's Mind Over Music

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

Described as an "experimental musician", the term applies in David Rosenboom's case, both to the avant-garde nature of the music he composes and performs and the extensive research into music-related phenomena that has characterized his impressive academic career.

Rosenboom will be a visitor at University of Victoria next week, under joint sponsorship of the University Lectures Committee and departments of music and psychology.

At present associate professor of music and interdisciplinary studies at York University in Toronto, Rosenboom studied music, physic, and computer science at the University of Illinois. At York he has been conducting research in methods of relating information processing in the human nervous system to esthetic experience, establishing ways to harness biofeedback to the production of music.

Research with the brilliant electronics engineer Don Buchla, has led to the development of specialized computerized equipment designed to interface the brain of the performer directly with sound-producing synthesis equipment. This special instrument thus becomes an extension of the brain and nervous system in the same way that a piano is an extension of the fingers.

Rosenboom will discuss, demonstrate and perform with this instrument during his visit to UVic. A free public lecture-demonstration in which he will describe the results of his research will take place Thursday at 8 p.m. in Elliott Building Room 167.

A noted performer on keyboard and electronic instruments, Rosenboom will present a solo performance using the new biofeedback instrument on Saturday, Feb. 26 at 8 p.m. in the MacLaurin auditorium.

General admission to the concert is $2.50; students and senior citizens, $1.50.

Contemporary Calligraphy

The oldest functional and expressive art form in China and Japan is contained in their calligraphy. This antiquity may not be immediately apparent to modern eyes, for the dynamic movement of black ink lines tracing an ancient arabesque upon white paper, has a starkness and a sense of vitality that coincides with contemporary taste.

At the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria a large and unprecedented exhibition of contemporary calligraphy as practiced in Japan is now on display—a showing that will end Feb. 27 and should definitly not be missed by any art lover interested in Asian modes.

It should also be of special interest for anyone on the look-out for decorative pieces for their own environment. For as this is a first visit here of representative works from the Calligraphy Federation of Japan, the artists have offered their works for sale at a price that reflects only the cost of mounting and framing.

The artists involved here are the masters and jurors of the Federation which claims a membership numbering well over 400.

The show is divided into three parts—the avant-garde, the Chinese style and the Japanese. It provides a fascinating revelation of the frail and subtle charm of the Japanese style in distinct contrast to the bold vigor of the Chinese.

In the avant-garde work it can be seen that the characters have been greatly transformed in comparsion with the Chinese style. They reflect the artist's own interpretive expression of the meaning and mood of the word rather than conforming to the original structure.

Significant also is the possibility that it may become an annual event and furthermore that it is one which has been initiated by the Art Gallery itseuf, independently of the National Museums Association.

Finzi Featured

A concert of music by 20th century British composer Gerald Finzi is a faculty event scheduled to take place at the Victoria Conservatory of Music, 1050 Joan Crescent, Friday at 8 p.m. The artists are soprano Selena James, clarinetist Larry de la Haye and pianist Mary Ducker. They will be assisted by the Conservatory String Orchestra conducted by Sydney Humphreys.

National Cheered by Critics

The 46-piece National Arts Centre Orchestra is less than 10 years old, having been formed in 1969 as resident orchestra of the new Ottawa Arts Centre, but it has already toured extensively in North America, Europe and the Soviet Union, winning high praise from audiences and critics alike.

Performing under the baton of Mario Bernardi, the orchestra has been variously described as "an exquisite orchestra" (Poland); "A beautifully honed orchestra with a performance standard which can stand with the best in the world," (Chicago); "Mario Bernardi has brought the NAC Orchestra to front-rank standing," (New York Times following a performance at Lincoln Centre).

The inspiration behind the orchestra's success is Bernardi, the Canadian-born conductor who returned from his post as musical director of the Sadlers Wells Opera in London to develop the new orchestra.

Performing the Schumann A minor Concerto with the orchestra in its Victoria appearance, Friday at the Royal Theatre, will be internationally noted pianist Robert Silverman who has soloed with the Toronto, and Vancouver Symphonies, the Vancouver Chamber Orchestra and National Youth Orchestra since returning to Canada in 1973.

Bernardi . . . orchestra's inspiration

The orchestra will also perform Haydn's Symphony No. 104 and Hetu's third symphony.

Tickets are on sale at the McPherson box office and Hillside Mall ticket centre. Concert time is 8:30 p.m.

Music From 1920s By Wind Ensemble

The University Wind Ensemble, a group of UVic music department wind and percussion players, was formed last fall under the direction of bassoonist Jesse Read, to explore the works written for wind instruments in various combinations.

On Thursday at 12:30 p.m. in the MacLaurin auditorium, the ensemble will present a program of music from the 1920s, including Three Penny Music — a suite from the Three Penny Opera by Kurt Weill, and the Concerto for piano and wind instruments by Igor Stravinsky.

In the performance of the latter piece the Wind Ensemble will be joined by music faculty member Dr. Gordana Lazarevich as piano soloist.

The Ensemble will travel to Nanaimo to present this program at Malaspina College and will also give a concert on Salt Spring Island for the Salt Spring Community Arts Council series.

'Boomers' Descend on Rhodesia

By ROBIN WRIGHT
Washington Post

SALISBURY — The lanky American strolled through the lobby of Meikles Hotel, drawing stares because of cowboy boots and the "Hell's Angels" tattoo on his forearm—sensational attire in this conservative former British colony.

"Another one," an elderly Rhodesian matron, sipping 4 o'clock tea, moaned to her two companions. All three shook their heads in despair.

The women, members of Salisbury's upper-class white society, were referring to the new cast of characters who have recently become part of the Rhodesian drama — foreigners drawn by the military and political crises (expected to escalate since Rhodesia's rejection on Monday of a British plan for a negotiated settlement) in the rebellious southern African territory.

In the staid and sleepy capital, the onslaught of "boomers"—anyone attracted to the "boom-boom" of weapons—has created a small sensation, disrupting the quiet British life-style of a country that has been ostracized by the world for more than 11 years, and where outside contact has been largely restricted to South African tourists.

The man drawing stares was David Bufkin, 37, who gained notoriety in the United States last year as a mercenary recruiter for the Angolan civil war.

The 37-year-old former cropduster from Kerman, Calif., let the words slip during his visit last month that he was in Rhodesia as a "double agent" on a joint CIA-Rhodesian intelligence operation aimed at breaking the Cuban intelligence network — although he appeared to spend most of his time drinking rum and coke in several local pubs.

Bufkin also claimed responsibility for exposing the Cuban intelligence network in Canada. Five Cubans, including two diplomats, were expelled from Canada earlier this month after Canadian officials investigated reports that Cubans were running a "spy school" in Montreal.

Bufkin told three journalists —an action that itself raised suspicions — that he had accepted an assignment from Cubans to obtain information for them in Rhodesia, but that he had secretly given information on the Cubans to the CIA. He said he then left for Rhodesia to expose other Cuban intelligence agents.

Both U.S. and Rhodesian officials have vehemently denied that Bufkin was working for them. One Rhodesian intelligence officer labelled it a "Walter Mitty fantasy. We don't need someone like Bufkin to help us flush out intelligence agents," he added angrily. Bufkin had actually come to join the Rhodesian Air Force but had been rejected and would not be welcome if he tried to return, the officer said.

A government official explained the boomer phenomenon: "When economic sanctions were imposed (by the United Nations in 1968) we had a flood of confidence tricksters, guys trying to make quick money by peddling goods we could no langer buy on the open market.

"Now, with the war escalating, we're being flooded with warmongers who are attracted by the blood and guts, not the principles we're fighting for. They come with fantastic stories about their experiences, but they often turn out to be losers."

The Rhodesian press is now running almost regular stories about visiting adventurers. The Rev. David Hill, a long-haired young minister from San Antonio, Tex., who tucked a pistol in his cowboy boots, created quite a stir when the Rhodesian Herald quoted him as saying:

"What's wrong with carrying a weapon? The Lord said you have to turn your cheek, but he didn't say you had to turn it twice."

Hill, who said he was the son of Gen. David (Tex) Hill, a U.S. fighter pilot, made an extensive tour of the war-torn eastern highlands near the Mozambique border, preaching to troops and local residents. He said the Billy Graham evangelical organization was paying his expenses.

Some of the "boomers" are welcome, such as Robin Moore, author of "Green Berets," and Robert K. Brown, editor and publisher of "Soldier of Fortune." Both were allowed to tour the war zones—an area off-limits to other writers and journalists —with government escorts.

Moore has announced that he intends to write a book on the four-year-old guerrilla war, while Brown's magazine has been largely responsible for publishing information that led some 400 Americans to join the Rhodesian Army.

Ralph Moss, 31, an American black from Sacramento, Calif., made headlines once and appeared on nationwide television twice within 10 days of his arrival earlier this month, after announcing his view that:

"Race relations in Rhodesia are as good, if not better, than in the United States. There's good will among blacks and whites here, a genuine desire to work together Black people are prospering here. They have greater opportunities than Africans in any other country on the continent."

Moss became the first foreign black to interview Prime Minister Ian Smith, and was feted at a dinner party given by ultra-conservative Foreign Minister P. K. Van Der Byl. Moss was also taken on an official government tour of military bases and allowed to interview a captured African guerrilla.

Many among the new breed of visitors, however, are greeted with skepticism by the Rhodesian government as carpetbaggers trying to exploit Rhodesia's problems for personal advantage.

American Nazi Party deputy Paul George Anderson infuriated officials when he arrived last October and began distributing what police called "racist literature." Police also said Anderson was the cause of several incidents at the Queens Hotel, which houses Salisbury's best-known, black-dominated bar. He was deported after five days in guerrilla war and the political climate.

Even "foreign volunteers" for the army are scrutinized, despite the desperate need for white officers for the black-Rhodesia.

Another turned away was Joe Belassario of the Volunteer Veterans for Vietnam, a group that once planned to return to Cambodia to renew efforts against the Vietcong, according to a Rhodesian government spokesman.

Belassario and two friends offered the government a unit of 100 Vietnam veterans who, they told army recruiters, could "move in and clean up the war." The army rejected the offer and the three left for neighboring Botswana, where Rhodesian police said they were picked up for passing bad cheques.

The government has also cast a skeptical eye on some journalist veterans of the Vietnam and Middle East wars who have arrived in Rhodesia over the past few months as southern Africa became the newest hot spot.

A new regulation requiring foreigners to obtain work permits, renewable weekly, was largely initiated to give the government leverage over journalists who sensationalize or misreport stories about the dominated security forces. "The gung-ho types are welcome if their motive is sincere," a recruiting officer said recently.

"But unfortunately a lot of them are now coming over just to witness the action, to be closer to it, not to make a contribution. We have to be more and more careful about whom we accept," he said.

CAVALRY SAVES THE FARMS . . .

Washington Post

IKOMO BARRACKS, Rhodesia — It is a scene right out of the old wild west, rifle-toting soldiers galloping over the rough hills of the frontier in search of "culprits" who have been raiding isolated farms.

This frontier, however, is the Rhodesia-Mozambique border. The soldiers are members of Greys' Scouts, the Rhodesian Army's mounted infantry unit — one of the few cavalry units still operating and the only one still fighting a war, the Rhodesians like to boast.

The "culprits" are black guerrillas waging a rapidly growing war against Rhodesia's white-dominated government.

The worse has become the newest weapon in Rhodesia's four-year-old counter-insurgency campaign, crucial in bush skirmishes for the same reasons the U.S. cavalry played an important role in settling the American west: Soldiers on horses are faster than soldiers on foot, horses are able to travel rough terrain and are relatively quiet.

Soviet, Cuban Entry Looms

By DAVID B. OTTAWAY
Washington Post

MAPUTO, Mozambique — Western diplomatic sources here are openly warning that the continuing forays by the white Rhodesian army deep inside Mozambican territory may soon cause President Samora Machel to seek substantial Soviet and Cuban assistance to bolster this country's meagre defenses.

"We may see this happening much sooner than we think," said one diplomat.

Hopes in some African and western circles that Africa might provide a substitute to an outside military force now appear to be dashed. Last week the Organization of African Unity failed to act at a meeting of its liberation committee on a proposal to form an African army to help the "frontline" states defend themselves against "racist (Rhodesian) aggression."

The prevailing view now in western embassies here seems to be that Machel cannot much longer continue to allow the Rhodesians to violate Mozambican territory, inflicting heavy damage on the country's economy and communications links, without taking some decisive action to counter and halt the attacks.

Some diplomats are convinced that one of the prime aims of the white-minority Rhodesian government in carrying out repeated incursions is to provoke Machel into calling for help from Cuba and the Soviet Union to strengthen Rhodesia's own bid for overt South African and U.S. backing.

The involvement of South Africa and the superpowers would have the effect of turning the struggle between whites and black nationalists in Rhodesia into an open East-West confrontation that could give a new lease on life to the beseiged white Rhodesian government.

To date, alarmist reports, particularly in the South African press, of a major Soviet arms buildup and the arrival of a large number of Cubans have been vastly exaggerated, these diplomats say. In fact, they feel Machel has shown amazing restraint so far in seeking outside help to defend his country, given the almost weekly raids by the Rhodesian army.

The incursions by special white and black commando units hace not only taken a heavy toll of lives but have also complicated government efforts to get the economy, badly deflated by the departure of more than 200,000 Portuguese, back on its feet.

So far the main external support for Mozambique's 20,000-man army has consisted of elements of two Tanzanian battalions stationed in the north. There are also unconfirmed reports that Somalia has sent some military advisers and possibly air force personnel to pilot MiGs of still uncertain origin.

But there is little indication that this limited African military assistance has added much to the defence capability of the Mozambique army, which is still undergoing conversion from a guerrilla to a professional fighting force. Nor has the presence of a few hundred Cubans, some of them reportedly acting as military advisers together with a few dozen Chinese, appreciably stiffened the country's resistance to the Rhodesian raids.

The Rhodesian army has reportedly carried out more than 30 incursions into Mozambique in the past six months, some of them penetrating more than 60 miles and lasting for several days.

The objective of these Rhodesian incursions now appears to be two-fold: first, harassing the guerrillas before they can infiltrate Rhodesia and second, crippling the Mozambique economy to drive home to President Machel the high cost of his support for the African nationalist struggle in Rhodesia.

Sentence Delayed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Sentencing of the 16-year-old boy convicted of killing Kelly Anne McClain, 10, last August has been postponed to Feb. 25 to give authorities more time to find a suitable detention facility for him. Prosecutor Rob Gourlay said Thursday the search had been extended outside of Canada.

Given in marriage by both her parents, Debra was lovely in a long white gown of crystalon with ruffled yoke edged with daisies, and full skirt falling entrain. Matron of honour, the bride's sister-in-law Kerry Cameron and bridesmatrons Susan Laban and Penny Bannister, wore identical gowns of cornflower blue dotted swiss and carried bouquets of white carnations and daisies. Best man Brian Papp and ushers Don Silzer and Michael Ricot enhanced the bridal party with the formal uniform of the RCMP of which the groom is a member.

Brother of the bride, Terry Cameron was master of ceremonies at a reception held at the Westwind Motor Inn, where a smorgasbord dinner and dancing was enjoyed by relatives and friends, many from out of town. James H. Bryan a longtime family friend proposed the toast to the bride.

A joyous celebration marked the occasion of the golden wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Smith on Saturday evening February 12, 1977, at Lambrick Park Church. Fifty invited guests shared in an evening of memories, fellowship and good wishes honouring the couple who were married in Winnipeg, Manitoba, and moved to Victoria in 1937 with their young sons Ernie, Jack and Melvin.

Reflections by photograph, with a narrative woven throughout, traced the couple's origins and life together over the 50 years. Mr. Smith was in good voice and sang two solos during the course of the evening while Mrs. Smith recited poetry she had composed during courting days. Mr. Carrick Penman and others paid high tribute and extended good wishes to the couple. Mrs. Sandy Renault sang two lovely solos. Messages of congratulations were received from the Prime Minister, the Lieutenant-Governor, the Premier and other dignitaries. A cassette recording and telegram brought good wishes from son Ernie in the Bahamas.

A TRULY BEAUTIFUL HOME NEAR MT. DOUGLAS PARK

Hello out there! I'm a 9-year-old house looking for a new owner. My present owners designed my 2400 sq. ft. with meticulous care and I boast 4 large bedrooms, family room with fireplace, large sunny sundeck off my dining room but these things aren't my special features. Take for example, the fact that I can see for miles onto the Haro Straits or turn around and see the Olympic Mts. And I'm sitting on a beautiful landscaped lot almost 11,000 sq. ft. I guess you could say I'm absolutely impeccable inside and out. My present owners have really cared for me and now they want me to be a new home for someone. It can be yours. I'm a brand new MLS and I'm worth more than the 586,500 asking price. Call: JACK PETRIE at 598-3321.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday call. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

NOTHING TO SING ABOUT

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

Greater Victoria — recognized in North America as an oasis for song birds — may soon have nothing to sing about.

Ornithologists, including B.C.'s outstanding bird artist Fenwick Lansdowne, are concerned over the steady decline of bird species which nest on the Saanich peninsula.

Poisonous pesticides and loss of habitat are blamed for the loss of birds which once filled the air with song in spring.

The attractive western bluebird, familiar to the older generation of Victorians, and the varied thrush, known for its bell-like song, have vanished, according to naturalist A. L. Davidson who has kept a record of the local bird population for 22 years.

The purple martin, the largest native swallow, though never numerous, is no longer seen.

"Not so long ago, chipping sparrows and the western flycatcher were familiar sights in every garden, but not now," he said.

"The meadow lark is on the verge of disappearing."

The population of several species of vireos and warblers is also down.

The skylark, a species introduced from England, has dropped from a population of 700 to 100 in the last few years.

Despite the decline of birds nesting in the area, Davidson said he is still hopeful the bird population will recover.

"I wish they would ban the use of those poisonous chemicals," he said.

But Charlie Guiget, curator of birds and mammals at the provincial museum, isn't so hopeful.

He says the decline of some species in the area has been drastic and much of this is due to pesticides.

Some birds, like pigeons and starlings, seemed to be able to resist the harmful effects of pesticides more than others, he said.

The loss of habitat, such as wetlands, empty lots and open spaces in the city is another factor.

PM's Promises 'Pie in the Sky'

OTTAWA (CP) — Municipal planning from Vancouver in the west to St. John's in the east has been upset by the Trudeau government's reneging on its 1974 election promises to spend millions on badly needed urban transit systems, the opposition has charged.

A storm broke in the Commons Friday as opposition members accused the Liberal government of "disgusting cynicism" and of "deliberately breaking a solemn election promise" to provide the funds for developing and building urban transit facilities.

Finance Minister Donald Macdonald in the absence of Prime Minister Trudeau became the principal target of attack. He said the government would not exercise restraint in expenditures to combat inflation and at the same time spend millions to develop urban transit.

"It is part of the Anti-Inflation program that the expenditures of the government be progressively reduced over a period," he said. "The government accordingly had reluctantly come to the conclusion that it could not extend financial assistance to municipalities in this field."

James McGrath (PC — St. John's East) reminded the minister that when Prime Minister Trudeau made the solemn promise on the hustings in June, 1974 the rate of inflation in Canada was much higher than it is today.

He also reminded the house that the prime minister assured the voters that other party's election promises were just that — "election promises," Trudeau had declared that his undertaking to assist municipalities with their urban transit problems was a "Liberal promise that would not be pie in the sky," said the opposition MP.

New Democratic Party leader Ed Broadbent attempted to get a motion before the house condemning "the disgusting cynicism of the Liberal government glaringly revealed when the finance minister casually announced that this election promise was dead." Liberals refused the required unanimous consent.

One-Way Tickets For Dissidents

VIENNA (Reuter) — Romanian police offered one-way exit permits to several dissidents Friday, but reports that rebel writer Paul Goma had been arrested proved incorrect. Goma and seven friends signed an open letter last week, accusing Romania and other Soviet-bloc countries of flouting human rights. The letter reached Yugoslavia on Monday.

Boaters Warned To Smarten Up

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

The Canadian armed forces second top man on the Pacific coast doesn't mince his words.

Col. Bendt Oxholm 46, took over as chief of staff to Rear-Admiral Andrew Collier, commander maritime command Pacific, this month.

In his first interview in his new posting, Oxholm made it clear if the boating public is determined to dump search and rescue work in the lap of the armed forces, it must also be prepared to be more disciplined and responsible.

The herring fishing season starts Feb. 27 and the armed forces, along with other federal departments, is providing protection with both ships and aricraft.

"We must respond because we are the agency that has the equipment to do it but people have got to realize that if they leave the total responsibility of their safety to DND it is only a matter of time before DND will start seeking partial authority, setting down guidelines before people set out to sea," Oxholm said.

"To sum up, irresponsible action on the part of fishermen and all those who go to sea will eventually erode the complete freedom now enjoyed by Canadians in this beautiful part of Canada."

Oxholm stressed the armed forces has a "moral responsibility rather than an official responsibility" for marine search and rescue work.

He said the overwhelming number of marine incidents, compared to those on the East Coast, is due to the large numbers of pleasure boaters "probably five times more than those in all the maritime provinces combined."

Oxholm does not agree with critics who complain some of the rescue equipment recently approved for Newfoundland should have been diverted to the Pacific Coast.

"Newfoundland had no coverage whatsoever, it was nonexistent," he said. "Any time in the North Atlantic from November until Jan. 15 minutes exposure will kill a man, even in an open boat.

"There's a hell of a difference (to the West Coast). Newfoundlanders are pretty crafty and cunning guys. They don't go out for pleasure. The sea is their living and it's the weather that kills them."

"Pleasure boating on the East Coast is like standing in a cold shower and tearing up $100 bills."

As second in command, Oxholm is responsible to Collier for all armed forces in the province.

Oxholm has served in ships, flown navy fighters and trained with the army.

That was in 1952 when his fighter squadron was expecting to join the Korean war aboard the British aircraft carrier HMS Glory.

Oxholm never made Korea because Gen. Eisenhower became the president of the United States, promising that no fresh United Nations units would be used.

"That's why I never got my VC, DSC or DSO . . . or coffin, one of the two," Oxholm grinned.

Asked which he prefers . . . sea time or flying . . . Oxholm fielded the question by referring to the late president John Kennedy's answer when watching a Navy-Air Force football game.

He said he'd root for the Air Force and pray for the Navy," Oxholm recalled with a chuckle.

Scrap Brewing in Cadboro Bay

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

The coming election of the Cadboro Bay Ratepayers' Association will see a major drive to unseat the current executive.

Circulars are being given to all residents urging them to join an opposition group before Feb. 22 so as to have a say in the association's affairs.

The movement is headed by Howard Sturrock of 3005 Baynes, who is running for president and three others, Dick Boss, Anna Foster and Gordon Howard, who are standing as directors.

Sturrock said his supporters are dissatisfied with the present executive who "have lost touch with the general membership."

"Saanich considers the ratepayers' association as the official spokesman for the community and, at the present, it isn't."

Sturrock said, in addition to having an executive more answerable to the members, he and his co-workers want an executive that will support development that is "compatible and not a burden to the community, taking clear action in opposing development not in accord with the wishes of the members."

Although he says it is not the main reason he and others are determined to change the association's executive, Sturrock is in the forefront of a move by Ten Mile Point residents to oppose Broadmead Farms Ltd.'s proposal for development of 70 acres on Prevost Hill, better known as Minnie Mountain by residents in the area.

Signatures are still being received but Sturrock reports 450 Ten Mile Point residents have already signed to protest the Broadmead housing project.

Broadmead proposes to build 124 multiple units which will include an eight-storey and a five-storey apartment as well as townhouses, using the rest of the site for 82 single-family homes.

Residents are concerned about the project's density and Broadmead's declaration that the development will be run as a private estate, roads and boulevards inside the area being owned by those living there.

Women's Centre Closes

The Victoria Women's Centre at 552 Pandora closed its doors this week. But members of the group hope they can begin a new, improved system of delivering services to women in the Greater Victoria area.

Alice Ages, a director of the centre said the decision to close was made partly because of a shortage of funds and partly because most members saw the space at the centre as unsuitable.

The group hasn't received any money since it got a $11,500 grant from the provincial government in December, 1975.

Ms. Ages said the centre was too large, cold, miserable, gloomy and drafty, too big for individual counselling and too small for group therapy."

The centre officially shut down Tuesday, and this Saturday beginning at 10 a.m. the group will liquidate its assets including tables, chairs, chesterfields, firewood and an Ashley stove, at a public sale at the Pandora address.

Ms. Ages said the group hopes to have enough funds left over to start a new program within three months.

In the meantime women needing emergency help can contact Rape Relief at 383-3232 or Everywoman's Books at 592-7311 between 11 a.m. and 6 p.m. Tuesdays to Saturdays.

Blossom Record

Victoria's second annual flower count is over with 470,600 blossoms bursting their way into the record book, and hopes are that next year's count will be bigger and better.

The main objective of the chamber of commerce sponsored event is to encourage tourists to holiday in Victoria year 'round since the weather is so good, project co-ordinator Carmella Costigan said today.

She said she feels the publicity campaign is working. Last year 183,643 flowers were tallied.

Steelmen Computerize Talks

TRAIL (CP) — When the United Steelworkers and the Association of Commercial and Technical Employees negotiating council sits down next week with the management of Cominco to bargain on behalf of 6,000 Cominco employees, they will be using the latest industrial relations tool to assist them at the bargaining table, a full operational computer terminal.

The idea of computer-assisted bargaining was first introduced to Canada by the United Steelworkers in 1975 during negotiations with the nternational Nickle Company (INCO) and the Steel Company of Canada (Stelco).

In practice, computer-assisted bargaining proved such a success that the system has been installed for use in the Cominco negotiations which are expected to be tough and lengthy, the Steelworkers said.

The portable computer terminal has been installed in the Local 480 Steelworker Hall in Trail and is connected with the union's main computer information banks in Toronto, which in turn can draw on the main international union computer in Pittsburgh.

Manning the system at the Trail end will be Paul Brennan of the union's research staff who has been assigned to the Cominco negotiations. The Toronto portion of the network will be operated by Ken Waldie in the Steelworker's national office research department.

In addition to supplying immediate information on all Cominco bargaining unit employees' wages, status, seniority and other pertinent bargaining information, the computer's memory banks have been programmed by the union to supply pension plans, actuarial data plus market and other types of information on Cominco multinational operations.

The extra bonus in the computer-assisted bargaining system is the ability to plug into the huge Statistics Canada computer information banks which are maintained by the federal government in Ottawa, containing literally millions of facts and figures on all aspects of the Canadian economy, including metals production, marketing figures and other invaluable bargaining information.

NO RIFLE REGISTRATION

Gov't Backs Off On Gun Control

TORONTO (CP) — Justice Minister Ron Basford promised a minimum of bureaucratic interference with the legitimate rights of gun owners in a speech Friday to the Ontario Federation of Anglers and Hunters.

The federation has been critical of some aspects of proposed federal fire-arm legislation.

Basford attempted to alleviate two of the federation's major concerns — mandatory registration of rifles and shotguns and a proposal that would require a character investigation of anyone purchasing a fire-arm.

"There may still be those among you who think that long-gun registration is part of our policy," the federal minister said. "It never has been."

"Registration of small, easily concealed handguns is a necessity and it appears to be effective in keeping down the number of incidents of handgun abuse," he said.

"However, the government believes that registration of long-guns is not an acceptable or workable control mechanism."

Basford said he would not push for the adoption of a so-called guarantor's regulation — a proposal that would require a person to supply two character references when applying to buy a fire-arm.

"I thought it might be a good way of involving the community in controlling the issuance of guns to irresponsible people," Basford said in an interview. "But this was seen by many people as a largely snooping function."

Fred Luff of Oakville, federation president, said he was surprised by Basford's remarks on the registration of markse on th registration of long-guns and that he felt the minister indicated a greater concern for the views of gun owners.

"Before I had the feeling that we were making presentations to the government that weren't being taken seriously," Luff said.

"What we're really concerned with is that the 300,000 legitimate gun owners in Canada were being penalized for a situation that a few nonlegitimate people were creating," he said.

Luff said the federation "could probably live with" a regulation that would delay the delivery of a fire-arm for a specified period after purchase and agreed with Basford that education is a key element in gun-control legislation.

In his speech, Basford had proposed mandatory prison sentences for persons convicted of fire-arm offences and regulations that would prohibit those convicted of serious, violent crimes from possessing fire-arms.

He said such a regulation, combined with increased search and seizure powers that would allow police to seize fire-arms in situations such as domestic disputes which "reasonably look like they might lead to violence," might go a long way toward reducing crimes of violence.

Most people agree with the need for legislation to control fire-arms, Basford said.

He said, however, that "the method must be both efficient and fair, contain built-in protection against abuse, and provide full access to a judicial, non-bureaucratic appeal procedure."

Bottle scavenger Rudy Achorner at home

$10,000 SURPRISE

ABBOTSFORD (CP) — Rudy Achorner, 45, of Abbotsford was driving along the Trans-Canada Highway Wednesday looking for beer bottles to cash in, and came up with $10,000 in cash stolen last Friday from a Chilliwack Super-Valu store.

Achorner, who turned the money over to the RCMP, said he was driving slowly along the highway when he spotted a leather coat.

"I backed up, thinking I might be able to use the coat, and when I unfolded it, there was this Royal Bank money bag wrapped up inside," said Achorner.

"I opened it up, and sure enough, there was all this money. So I took it home with me and listened to the radio and television to see if anybody had been robbed lately.

He admitted later that he had been tempted to keep the money.

"I thought about it for a moment, but I decided it wasn't worth it. All those bills were probably marked, and if I spent them they would be easy to trace."

Achorner phoned the Royal Bank branch at Chilliwack, and they told him to bring the money in for safekeeping just in case someone had seen him pick it up. The bank contacted the police.

Bank authorities told him he probably will receive a reward but that he will have to wait to see whether police can locate the remainder of the stolen cash. About $14,000 remains to be found.

Achorner, who immigrated from Austria in 1954, was clearing wood from the small farm he owned 15 years ago when he threw out his back.

The injury became worse until he couldn't do any heavy work and had to go on welfare. Five years ago, he had to sell his farm because he couldn't afford to expand his milking operation — the only way he could have remained solvent.

Now, he brings in $160 a month from his welfare payments, plus an extra $10 to $15 from part-time jobs — one of them selling bottles.

And on The Rose Pages . . .

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canadian information officials are proving that Prime Minister Trudeau's coming visit is not a matter to be taken lightly.

Landing on newsroom desks this week was an elaborate, color-coded, thumb-indexed, plastic-bound press kit of more than 500 pages.

Crammed with old speeches, news releases, background papers and biographies, the intimidating volume gives the Canadian position on a wide range of topics that could arise in Trudeau's talks with President Jimmy Carter.

With attention to detail, a note at the beginning informs readers that English material on the white pages is the same as French on blue pages, while bilingual texts are on yellow pages, English-only material is on rose-colored pages and French-only material is on green pages. The note is only in French.

B.C. will study the possibility of obtaining federal funds for insulation of homes and buildings, Premier Bill Bennett said Friday. Liberal leader Gordon Gibson said Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia are already receiving aid.

Loophole Plugged

In a move to plug a "loophole" in the Strata Titles Act under which some developers were "indiscriminately stratifying land," the B.C. cabinet Friday passed an order which now requires a prospectus to be filed. See story on Page 10.

Maids Praised

VANCOUVER (CP) — Since Vancouver's new meter maids began work Sept. 14, revenue has almost doubled over the same period in 1975, city engineer Bill Curtis said Friday. After paying the cost of meter maintenance and salaries, the city showed a profit of $189,000 from meter collections and fines compared with a profit of $95,000.

Supertanker Blockade Planned

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Greenpeace Foundation and United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union will join forces to blockade the Strait of Juan de Fuca and Dixon Entrance against supertankers travelling the B.C. coast.

Bob Hunter, president of the environmentalist foundation, said Friday that "the basic Canadian reaction to the inevitability of supertanker oil spills along our coast has been to lie down and whimper a lot."

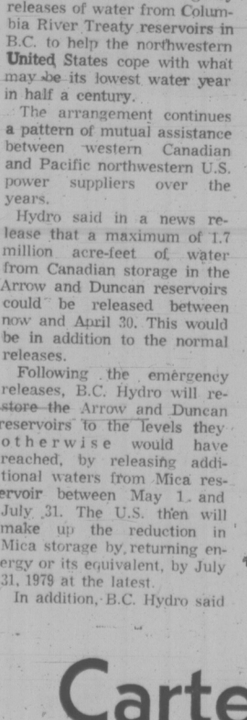
"The time has come to take direct action," said Hunter. "Our entire west coast environment is threatened by the short-term interests of oil industry. We represent the vast majority of British Columbians when we say we simply do not want these tankers coming into our waters . . .

"Our position is simple: No supertankers. We will put boats into the front line along with the fishermen. It's a drastic action, but we are forced into it by the failure of our federal or provincial governments to do anything at all to defend our shores from this threat."

He said Greenpeace was inviting "every person with a boat on the west coast to join our flotilla."

The UFAWU convention here approved a plan Friday to organize the blockades in an effort to stop the tankers from plying B.C. waters.

The fishermen said the flotillas will stand in the way of supertankers heading through Juan de Fuca Strait to the Cherry Point oil refinery, and any tankers destined for Kitimat, if a proposed pipeline and oil port are built there.



Emergency Water To Flow to U.S.

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. Hydro said Friday it has agreed to make emergency releases of water from Columbia River Treaty reservoirs in B.C. to help the northwestern United States cope with what may be its lowest water year in half a century.

The arrangement continues a pattern of mutual assistance between western Canadian and Pacific northwestern U.S. power suppliers over the years.

Hydro said in a news release that a maximum of 1.7 million acre-feet of water from Canadian storage in the Arrow and Duncan reservoirs could be released between now and April 30. This would be in addition to the normal releases.

Following the emergency releases, B.C. Hydro will restore the Arrow and Duncan reservoirs to the levels they otherwise would have reached, by releasing additional waters from Mica reservoir between May 1 and July 31. The U.S. then will make up the reduction in Mica storage by returning energy or its equivalent, by July 31, 1979 at the latest.

In addition, B.C. Hydro said it will be paid about $500,000 for energy produced at downstream U.S. generating plants as a result of the emergency releases.

"There will be no reduction in the amount of power available to British Columbia as a result of the emergency arrangement," the utility said.

"B.C. Hydro's own generating system, which includes the vast Williston Lake reservoir on the Peace River, is designed to accommodate a sequence of low-water years without limiting its ability to supply power for subsequent years."

Because of low run-offs this year, however, Hydro recently halted exports of surplus power to the U.S. in order to ensure that B.C. Hydro reservoirs do not fall below adequate levels.

A mid-February water supply outlook for the Columbia basin in the U.S. northwest, issued by the national weather service and the soil conservation service in the U.S., estimated that Columbia River run-foo at The Dalles, Ore., will be about 57 million acre-feet for the period January through July.

Toxic Spill Threatens Thousands

CINCINNATI (AP) — A 75-mile-long spill of a toxic chemical, believed discharged in West Virginia, is flowing down the Ohio River and threatening water supplies as far south as Louisville, Ky.

Public officials urged people to boil all drinking water.

Joseph Harrison, chief of water supply at Chicago's branch of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), said the chemical—carbon tetrachloride—can damage the liver and has caused cancer in laboratory test animals.

"If you drink it, you probably won't be acutely affected right away," he said. "There is a risk, it could cause cancer eventually. It's a high risk."

"We have a good idea at this point what company is the source," said James Manwaring, EPA director in Philadelphia, but he declined to identify the firm.

The 70-ton spill is travelling 12 miles a day. EPA officials estimated Friday it might take four days to reach Cincinnati, the next major city in the path of the chemical.

By DEREK SIDENIUS

A group of youths who flagged down a 26-year-old North Saanich woman early today with the intention of robbing her fell out among themselves.

The result: One wound up stabbed.

Central Saanich police said the unidentified woman was on her way home from work at about 3 a.m. when a man ran out into the middle of Pat Bay Highway at the Island View intersection and flagged her down.

Police said the man told the woman a friend had been hurt and asked her to help.

When she got out of her car the man pulled a knife and said he was going to rob her.

Three other youths who had been hiding in a ditch beside the road emerged and got into the woman's car driving it 300 feet down Island View to Lochside.

The woman was forced at knife point to walk the distance.

As the four were going through her purse a fifth youth who had apparently been asleep in the back seat of the suspects car parked nearby awoke and tried to stop the robbery.

A wild fight broke out and the woman watched in horror as the man with the knife attacked the youth slashing him in the head and stabbing him in the abdomen and stomach.

The scuffle lasted several minutes, police said, with the two men knocking against the woman's car bending a fender and splattering the side with blood.

The youth eventually collapsed, bleeding profusely. His companions threw him in the back of their car and sped off south on Pat Bay Highway leaving behind the woman and her purse.

Police presume the wounds were serious. All hospitals in the Greater Victoria area have been alerted but no one matching the description of the youth has yet been admitted for treatment.

Police said the five youths are 16 to 20 years of age. The man with the knife had long brown hair and was about six feet tall.

The woman, although badly shaken, was unhurt.

Police described the suspects' car as a 1957 Chevrolet, dark in color with brown primer paint on the left front fender.

The attempted robbery took place at the same spot on the highway where a woman motorist was abducted last November by a man who raped her.

In that incident the woman was returning home late at night when the traffic signals at the intersection changed forcing her to stop. As she was waiting a man opened the passenger door and climbed in.

Auto Kills Youth

One youth is dead and three others were injured, one seriously, after two traffic mishaps in Saanich early today.

Dead is William Alexander Wilson, 19, of 4520 Bissenden.

Saanich police said Wilson was killed instantly when he walked into the path of a southbound car on Pat Bay Highway in front of the Royal Oak Inn at 12:54 a.m.

Driver of the car, John Frederick Weed, 19, of 3586 Tillicum, told police the youth appeared to "come out of nowhere."

Wilson, who had just left the Royal Oak Inn where he had been drinking beer with friends, was knocked 190 feet through the air, his body landing on a grassy strip beside the road.

The fatality was the second in Saanich in a 24-hour period.

Meanwhile, Dennis Wilson, 14, of 994 Cloverdale, is reported in serious condition after a car crash.

Police said Wilson was a passenger in a car that slammed into a hydro pole at the corner of Saanich Road and Falmouth at 5:45 a.m.

The driver of the car, Glen Blandeau, 19, and another passenger, Lloyd Lindsay, 14, both of 3034 Bethune, were taken to Royal Jubilee where they are in fairly good condition.

Police believe the trio was setting out on a fishing trip at the time of the accident.

The hydro pole was severed at its base kocking out power in the area for a short time.

Carter Probing CIA Payments

By BOB WOODWARD
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The White House announced Friday it is conducting an "intensive and comprehensive" review of foreign intelligence operations as new reports circulated that the CIA had secret financial relationships with at least half a dozen other foreign leaders.

The announcement of the presidential review was made by press secretary Jody Powell during a briefing to reporters in which he declined to comment on a report in The Washington Post Friday that the CIA has for 20 years been making secret cash payments to King Hussein of Jordan.

Powell's statement was the first official indication of the president's concern over CIA activities and his apparent intention to bring them under control.

In a statement read by Powell the administration pointedly praised King Hussein as "an outstanding national leader" who had "played a constructive role in reducing tensions in the Middle East."

The payments to Hussein are not the only example of the CIA paying money to world leaders, according to reliable sources.

Cypriot President Archibishop Makarios received amounts of approximately $1 million annually in the late 1960s, the sources said. It is not known if these CIA payments have continued.

In his session with reporters, Powell doggedly refused to elaborate on his opening statment. At times during the senitsive briefing the questioning grew tense and Powell appeared to be groping for words.

Sources said that President Jimmy Carter ordered the Hussein payments stopped this week within a day of learning of them.

It was learned, meanwhile, that the court-censored manuscript of a book by two former government intelligence officers named Hussein along with Jomo Kenyat-

Houseboaters Happy Despite Gov't Indifference

By AB KENT
Times Staff

A lucky group of Esquimalt people have found a kind of waterfront nirvana that given a chance, could help shape future housing for coast dwellers.

Vancouver think-tank founder Frank Ogden believes float houses could solve the housing crisis for persons with a taste for this unique life style.

Unfortunately, no government has adopted a policy to recognize and encourage floating homes, as an alternative to land-gobbling single family accommodation.

The occupants of 14 floating homes at West Bay Marina, 453 Head, are the only legal houseboat dwellers on southern Vancouver Island.

Municipalities — it appears don't want float homes and unorganized areas have no such zoning.

Even in Esquimalt the float homes are barely tolerated. Council would like to see the end of them and nearby landdwellers consider them a blight.

There are no sewer connections for floating homes and development is limited to 14. Meanwhile, West Bay Marina, the landlord, is having financial problems.

The uncertain future is a strong disadvantage to living afloat, according to 35-year-old Carl Smith, who built his home for $20,000 three years ago and remains delighted with it.

Only the doubts of council and other land dwellers about the float home style of life detract from its enjoyment, Smith said.

Formerly a welder, Smith recently bought a commercial fishing vessel, so he, his wife Phyllis and son Steven are not as committed to a fixed location.

They can tow their home to any up-coast private cove that pleases them.

The first Vancouver float dwellers and some in Victoria's Lime Bay or up the Gorge, were squatters on public foreshore and tended to give floating communities a bad name.

But Seattle has a 70-year history of permanent float housing on Lake Union where there are some 300 residents and may imposing structures. About 200 people live on the water along the Willamette River in Portland and there are floating communities in Sausilito and Berkeley in San Francisco Bay.

All are taxed and treated as conventional residential properties.

Virtually all the urban float homes in B.C. are in the Lower Mainland — in Coal Harbor and North Vancouver on Burrard Inlet, and in suburban Richmond. Some have plans for sewer systems.

Overseas, floating homes are well-known on the River Thames, in Holland, India and the Orient.

They are often boats rather than permanent homes on floats.

Mel Kristian, co-owner of a 20 x 30 - foot floating cottage at West Bay said the sea has always been taken for granted here as a means of livelihood or transportation and recreation but never as a permanent place to live.

Shore people tend to suspect those who express a preference for living afloat. People who live on boats are freaks, the way trailer people once were considered.

What difference is there between living afloat and living in a house overlooking the sea?

"One is just a view. The other, you are actually a living part of the water," she said. "We have our pets (aside from two cats and the several dogs of neighboring float folk) — the ducks come up to be fed every day.

"We love it. It is definitely an alternative life style.

"A float home is so much a part of nature itself. When the wind blows, all the bells start ringing on the fish boats at the marina. The scene changes daily.

"There is very much of a community feeling down here. The people are individualistic but there is still a close feeling and help when you need it. You also learn to cope with things."

Like boat-owners, floaters become self-reliant, able to repair plumbing, do their own painting, handyman jobs, carry garbage ashore, bring fuel oil aboard and generally look out for each other.

J. T. Silva, 27, another welder, recently married Christine, 23, a psychiatric nurse. They would have had difficulty obtaining a conventional urban home because of cost and scarcity.

He asked where else they could obtain their own place for a total $16,000 and a bank put up the money.

They are five minutes from downtown, have no garden to maintain or grass to cut, the community is pleasant, the atmosphere peaceful and the outlook interesting.

The Silvas have lived afloat almost a year and are really enjoying it.

"There are really nice people around here."

Among the neighbors are a school teacher and practical nurse.

To Silva the biggest thing is the tranquillity.

"It is so peaceful all around, especially in the evenings. There is no traffic noise and even the airplanes in the harbor are over quickly."

The homes are tidy and there is no evidence of pollution.

Among the float families there are a total of eight children, mostly in four homes moored on the southeast side of the marina. The rest, with one exception, are moored together on the northwest side and are reached by a separate gangway.

The Smith home—the only one mounted on steel floats—is among the most comfortable.

A visitor steps through a Dutch door into a tiny, galley-like kitchen cozy with the aroma of fresh baking and decorated with macrame hangings and plants.

Further in, warm furnishings, leaded glass panes, a small loft with its own window.

Float houses reflect a special flavor unlike most land-based dwellings. They are reminiscent of an alpine village in design, in generous use of cedar inside and out and in their closeness and charm.

There is surprisingly little of the marine motif probably because neighboring boats, docks and waterfront speak for themselves.

Janet Ker owns a shuttered, two-storey home with striking shake roof and projecting dormer. A winding staircase leads from a modern living room to the sleeping area.

Next door an A-frame thrusts mast-high, and inside behind sliding glass doors, a ship's ladder provides access to a loft.

In the next row, a one-of-a-kind design has long, narrow, vertical windows and skylights for maximum privacy.

Most homes are supported on floats of fibreglass-covered plywood and wooden deck lashed securely to moored floats with concrete sidewalks and street lights, electric wiring and PVC water connections.

Oil stoves are favored for cooking and heating. Some use propane. All have marine toilets that flush directly into the sea.

The marina charges 17 cents a square foot monthly moorage which works out to about $110 for a typical single floor cottage. There are no taxes.

Esquimalt has tried to overcome this by considering float homes to be improvements on the marina property. Last year part of the assessment was allocated to floating homes for the first time.

West Bay receiver-manager Terry McMullen said the action was appealed, but the matter has bogged down and indications are that in the meantime the practice will continue.

Efforts to dispose of the marina are being pursued and float home owners have been told the assessment problem will ultimately be theirs.

The irony is that float homeowners would like to be taxed and enjoy all the privileges and responsibilities of property owners ashore.

But so far, the provincial government has ignored their pleas, even though legislation has recognized the once-despised mobile home owner.

"Someone's going to have to come to grips with the problem," McMullen said. He concedes perhaps the float home concept does not go hand in glove with marinas and requires special areas.

Esquimalt Mayor Art Young said council is disturbed because the original marina concept at West Bay has not been achieved. It was intended to make moorage attractive to visiting boaters for short-term periods of living aboard, he said.

The area is intended for marine-oriented public enjoyment and general marina purposes and a Capital Improvement District project is on progress nearby to provide park, walkways, decking and planted areas.

Young said he personally opposes float homes in Esquimalt because public access waterfront is at a premium and boat owners deserve first call.

Float home dwellers point out that their homes do not occupy potential boat moorage because water depth is too shallow.

Although municipal jurisdiction extends 1,000 feet offshore, foreshore land is owned by the Crown (federal) and leased to the marina. The federal government has no quarrel with float homes.

Charles Brooks, Ministry of transport administrator, knows of no moves between the three levels of government towards making life afloat an easier proposition.

He notes the style of living in vessels that are intended for accommodation is becoming more attractive due to the ever-increasing price of land.

"I personally think, why not? But you may not be able to live where you want."

Esquimalt's assessment action poses some bizarre questions. What would happen if the homes are towed away from the marina?

"It boggles the mind" that a marina operator may be left with the taxpaying responsibility for something departed, said McMullen.

Or if the operator kicks out float home tenants as the economics of keeping the marina afloat diminish? Where do they go?

"Will they just be towed into the harbor and cut loose?"

Maybe the municipality would fall heir to the houses if they are seized for taxes. What then?

A Vancouver marina operator, Graham Clarke, of Harbor Ferries in Coal Harbor, has five float homes at moorage, plus many boats with people living aboard. He will not accept new float dwellers.

He said this is because the city doesn't like them and they tend to look "shanty-like after a while," and because they take foreshore away from boaters.

"Floating houses don't have a big future here. There is a great demand on waterfront and a finite amount of waterfront. I feel the waterfront is for boats."

Vancouver, with plans to install sewerage, has the nearest thing in B.C. to taxation of float homes. It charges a marina a licence fee for each liveaboard or float home, based on length.

Rates jumped 38 per cent this year and start at $199 rising to more than $300 a year for big vessels. North Vancouver also has designated places for floaters, but Richmond, like Esquimalt, wants them out.

'Float' Act to Sink?

A bill introduced at the current sitting of the legislature would make float home owners subject to taxation and eligible for grants and mortgage help.

But it is a private member's bill — not sponsored by the government — and likely to die on the order paper.

Socred Stephen Rogers, of Vancouver South, brought in the Floating Homes Regulation Act which would allow the cabinet to make regulations dealing with taxation, assessment and other aspects of living on the water.

Owners would get the provincial home owner grant and home acquisition assistance, while their property would be assessed and taxed under the Municipal, School and Taxation Acts and the Vancouver Charter.

The bill defines a floating home as any dwelling which floats or a vessel acting permanently or temporarily as a residence.

Ironically, the organization which fought for several years for recognition of float homes — Greater Vancouver Floating Home Co-operative — appears to have folded.

PLANE IN MALL MAKES SOS CALL

A $2,200 search and rescue mission ended Friday evening with the discovery that a "downed plane" was on display in the Hillside Shopping Mall.

The search, which lasted more than an hour, was launched after somebody triggered the emergency locator transmitter of the Cessna, part of an aeronautical display at the centre.

A CFB Comox Buffalo was sent up after the ELT was armed and tripped shortly before 4 p.m., presumably by one of the many visitors to the display.

By 4:20 p.m., the search and rescue plane was in the air and the ELT signal was tracked down to the mall an hour later.

Search and Rescue officials were not amused.

Victoria Flying Club, owners of the aircraft, will get a letter of reprimand from the ministry of transport.

The false alarm was the 37th this year caused by an ELT but few result in an actual search operation.

A rescue centre spokesman said ELTs can be jolted into operation by a hard landing or by accidentally being left "armed" after a flight.

'War' Feared In Cab Ranks

Independent cabbie Tony Lambert claims big cab companies are putting pressure on one-man outfits and he predicts there could be violence.

But spokesmen for two of Victoria's larger taxi companies today denied there is a conspiracy to push small taxi firms out of the business.

Lambert, of Empress Cabs, said Friday a taxi war with smashed windshields, dented fenders and slashed tires could result unless city council comes to the aid of small firms being squeezed by the big boys.

Lambert claims a successful appeal by the Greater Victoria Taxi Owners' Association to have city hall approve a 25 per cent fare increase will kill the taxi business in the city.

The GVTOA represents several large companies in the city and has asked the city to recognize it as the industry's spokesman.

Council wants more information before considering the GVTOA fare increase request.

A dispatcher for one GVTOA company said a fare increase will benefit everyone in the business.

He discounted the suggestion of a taxi war. "In a small town like Victoria, almost everyone co-operates."

Lambert also accused the larger taxi firms of strongly supporting parts of the city's new taxi bylaw which Lambert claims discriminate against smaller firms.

The recent bylaw stipulates every taxi company that wants to operate in the city must have an office in the city.

Lambert said neither he nor any of the small operators could afford a city office.

The large firms already had offices in the city and wouldn't be affected by that part of the bylaw, he said.

Lambert said city hall also plays into the hands of the large companies by not permitting small operators stands at hotels.

Lambert said he lived through a taxi war in Toronto in the mid-50s and does not want to see another. But he warns it could happen if the larger companies pushed the independents too far.

Two Escape Fire But Boat Gutted

Two persons had to jump overboard when a cabin cruiser caught fire Friday night as it pulled away from the dock at Van Isle Marina in Sidney.

Sidney RCMP said Kenneth Provan, of 2001-614 Michigan, and Eric Christensen, 17, of 3360 Rolston, had stopped at the dock just before 10 p.m. to get fuel for their 23-foot boat.

While there, they inadvertently spilled some gas on the engine compartment and shroud.

They cleaned up the spillage.

Police said the pair tried to pushed off, started the engine and got about 50 feet when the engine exploded in flame.

put out the blaze but were forced to jump overboard.

Jim Earl, a Central Saanich police officer who was working on his boat nearby, saw what happened and towed the blazing boat away from the dock.

Sidney firemen attended but were unable to save the boat which burned to the waterline.

Police said Provan received minor burns to his leg. Christensen was not hurt.

ASK THE TIMES

Q. When was the Sooke Road (Highway 14) first hard-surface, specifically that section beween Luxton and the village of Sooke? — ja.C.C.

A. A highways department officer perusing ancient correspondence was able to find reference to a hard surfacing "of sorts" being put down in 1926-27, generally in the area between Glen Lake and Sooke.

Faithful Franks Deserve Most Valuable Fan Award

Took in my first hockey game of the season last Saturday night.

By now you can tell I'm not what you'd call a faithful fan, but boy, what a wow of an evening I had!.

My small daughter and I were treated to a classic encounter, with the Victoria Cougars scoring 12 seconds from the end to salvage a 5-5 tie with Portland Winter Hawks; I was delighted that, after all the bad incidents, there wasn't a single scrap; and I met John Frank and his wife Peggy.

Peggy and John . . . watching the fun

Now there are fans for you!

They are so loyal to the Cougars that they never miss a game, unless they are so sick they can't struggle down to Memorial Arena — and Peggy is 78 and John will be 92 in April...

After watching the Ottawa Senators play hockey while he worked in the east for the Department of Veterans' Affairs in the early 1920s, John Frank moved to Victoria in 1923 and became one of the Cougars' first fans.

He followed them from the moment they got started, stayed with them while they became the Victoria Maple Leafs for a while — though he admits with a grin that he didn't like the name — and he has faithfully followed the modern Cougars in the junior Western Canada Hockey League.

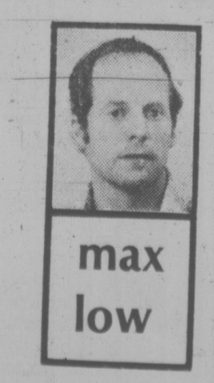
"I remember watching the Cougars win the Stanley Cup here in 1925 in the old wooden rink where Saunders and Flitchman now stands," John says. "I made $10 on that one. Bet a guy in Duncan the Cougars would win."

Peggy, too, has long been a keen fan and started watching the game in New York in 1925. Together they have sat in seats one and two in row E of section 32 (right behind the visiting team's bench) for "years and years."

Hockey. They love it. The speed, the thrills. They're there in every game. You couldn't get anything more exciting for spectators, they'll tell you.

Yet, perhaps a little ironically . . . John Frank can't even skate!

Born on April 15, 1885, in the little seaside town of Worthing in Sussex, he was brought up in the English tradition of rugby and cricket. And he remembers his only brief flirtation with the art of skating was going out on to a frozen pond with a pair of borrowed skates and a chair.



Yet as soon as he came to Canada in 1908, John Frank became captivated by hockey. He watched it wherever he could: on the Prairies, in Ottawa and finally in Victoria where he was in the insurance business until 1946.

Today, when people meet John Frank they find it hard to believe he's almost 92. He looks in his 70s but when people doubt him, just like the 20-year-old who has trouble getting in a beer parlor, he whips out his driver's licence.

That's right, he still drives his car! And so does Peggy. In fact, only two weeks ago they ended 20 years of driving blind people to the White Cane Club for the CNIB.

So what's the secret, John?

Well, he admits, he has kept active. He has always been a keen gardener and still tends it regularly in the summer.

"But I don't do eight hours like I used to," he says.
